SUPER BOWL CHAMPIONS

LB Ray Lewis - 2000
Super Bowl XXXV MVP

In a magnificent effort showcasing thrilling performances by their defense, offense and special teams units, the Baltimore Ravens won Super Bowl XXXV with a 34-7 victory over the New York Giants. Allowing the Giants a meager 152 total net yards, New York's attack crossed midfield just twice, while Baltimore's "D" posted 4 INTs. LB Ray Lewis was named the game's MVP, capping an accolade-filled season in which he was also tabbed the NFL's Defensive Player of the Year.

QB Joe Flacco - 2012
Super Bowl XLVII MVP

Baltimore defeated San Francisco, 34-31, in Super Bowl XLVII, capturing the franchise's second World Championship. After an amazing first-half performance, the Ravens took a commanding 28-6 lead. But following a bizarre, 34-minute power outage that halted play, the 49ers stormed back into contention. Clinging to a 34-29 edge late in the game, the Ravens stood firm on a pivotal goal-line stand, jamming SF on four-straight plays inside the 7-yard line. QB Joe Flacco was named the game's MVP.

2014 SEASON OVERVIEW

The Baltimore Ravens finished with a 10-6 regular season record en route to earning their sixth playoff berth in the past seven seasons (all under head coach John Harbaugh). ... Baltimore is one of four teams (GB, Ind. & NE) to make the playoffs six times since 2008, with Baltimore also earning 10 postseason berths in the last 15 seasons. ... Under Harbaugh, the Ravens have posted at least 10 wins in five of his seven seasons at the helm, with Baltimore owning the NFL's second-most total victories (82, including playoffs) since his 2008 arrival (NE is first with 91 wins). ... In 2014, the Ravens finished third in the division behind Pittsburgh (11-5) and Cincinnati (10-5-1). ... Baltimore captured a 30-17 victory at Pittsburgh in the Wild Card round, notching its league-high 10th playoff win since 2008. ... The Ravens' bid to reach their fourth AFC Championship game under coach Harbaugh was cut short in New England, where Baltimore fell to the eventual Super Bowl Champion Patriots, 35-31, after holding two 14-point leads during a thrilling Divisional Playoff battle.

2014 OFFENSE

• The Ravens set single-season franchise records by scoring 409 points and producing 5,838 yards. Baltimore averaged the NFL's eighth-most points per game (25.6) and 12th-most yards per game (364.9). The Ravens' 126.2 rushing yards per contest ranked eighth in the league.

• Baltimore permitted 19 sacks, the second fewest in team history (17 in 2006). The 19 ranked only behind Denver's 17 as the NFL's fewest.

• QB Joe Flacco finished with career bests in yards (3,986) and TD passes (27), while WR Steve Smith Sr. reached the 1,000-yard receiving milestone for the eighth time in his career (1,065 yards on 79 catches). WR Torrey Smith posted 11 receiving TDs, the second most in Ravens single-season history (Michael Jackson, 14 in 1996).

• RB Justin Forsett produced a career-high 1,266 rushing yards (NFL's fifth most) and led the league in runs of 20-plus yards (a team-record 17). Forsett's franchise-record 5.4 ypc average was first among NFL RBs.

2014 DEFENSE

• The Ravens allowed the NFL's sixth-fewest points (18.9) and eighth-fewest yards per game (336.9). Baltimore was one of five teams (Buf., Det., KC & Sea.) to rank in the Top 8 in points and yards allowed.

• Led by OLB Terrell Suggs and 2014 Pro Bowl selections OLB Elvis Dumervil and rookie LB C.J. Mosley, Baltimore racked up the NFL's second-most sacks (49, tied with Philly), boasted the No. 2 red zone defense and allowed the fourth-fewest rushing yards per game (88.3).

• Dumervil (a franchise-record 17 sacks) and Suggs (12) combined to produce the most sacks (29) among NFL duos. Mosley was the NFL's only player to post at least 125 tackles, 3 sacks and 2 INTs. His 129 tackles ranked eighth in the NFL and were first among rookies.

2014 SPECIAL TEAMS

• P Sam Koch produced the NFL's No. 3 gross average (47.4) and No. 1 net average (43.3), setting the Ravens' single-season records for each.

• Highlighted by his third-career 108-yard KOR-TD, RS Jacoby Jones ranked second in the NFL in KOR average (30.6). (As a team, the Ravens were No. 1 in the league with a 28.3 average.)

• K Justin Tucker (401 career points) became the second-fastest kicker in NFL history to reach the 400 milestone, doing so in his 48th game (Jan Stenerud - 47 games). Tucker scored 129 points, making 29 of 34 FGAs (all misses coming from 54 and beyond).

2015 COACHING UPDATES

• Baltimore hired Marty Mornhinweg as its new quarterbacks coach, replacing Rick Dennison, who agreed to become Gary Kubiak's offensive coordinator in Denver. Mornhinweg spent the last two seasons as the New York Jets' offensive coordinator. He was previously the offensive coordinator/assistant head coach for the Philadelphia Eagles, where he worked with head coach John Harbaugh on Andy Reid's Philly staff.

• Other new coaching staff assignments include: Chris Hewitt (fourth season in Baltimore) being promoted to defensive backs coach, Matt Weiss (seventh season with Ravens) appointed cornerbacks coach and Drew Wilkins (sixth season in Baltimore) named defensive coaching assistant. Hewitt, the Ravens' assistant secondary coach in 2014, replaces Steve Spagnuolo, who was hired as the New York Giants' defensive coordinator.

• The Ravens also promoted Richard Angulo to tight ends coach and Mike Macdonald to defensive assistant, and they hired Andy Bischoff as offensive quality control. Angulo spent the 2014 campaign as a Ravens' coaching intern in support of offensive quality control duties. He replaces Brian Pariani, who left to coach on Kubiak's staff in Denver. Macdonald spent last season as a Ravens' defensive coaching intern, while Bischoff served the last two years under Trestman as tight ends/staff coordinator with the Chicago Bears. Prior to his time in Chicago, Bischoff also worked under Trestman with the CFL's Montreal Alouettes (2008-12).

2014 INJURY REPORT

• Baltimore placed 19 players on Injured Reserve, tied for the most during head coach John Harbaugh's tenure (the Ravens also had 19 on IR in 2008 when they advanced to the AFC Championship).

• The Ravens' secondary was hit hard by injuries, with six DBs (five CBs and one safety) placed on IR. Twelve different CBs were on the Ravens' 53-man roster at some point in 2014.

• Players who missed time while on IR included standout starters TE Dennis Pitta (hip, 14 games), CB Jimmy Smith (foot, nine games) & RT Rick Wagner (foot, two games). Other key players placed on IR: S Terrence Brooks (knee), LS Morgan Cox (knee), CB Danny Gorrer (knee), CB/RS Asa Jackson (knee) and RB Lorenzo Taliaferro (foot).

2014 HONORS / MILESTONES

2014 PLAYER MILESTONES

TE Owen Daniels
• Became the 35th TE in NFL history to gain 5,000 rec. yards (has 5,144)
• Has caught a pass in 103-consecutive regular season games played, tying Jason Witten for the longest active streak among NFL TEs

OLB Elvis Dumervil
• Earned his fourth Pro Bowl after recording a franchise-record and career-high-tying 17 sacks (fourth time in his career he produced double-digit sacks). The 17 QB drops were the NFL's third-highest total, while his -127.5 sack yards ranked second and are also a franchise record
• Combined with OLB Terrell Suggs (12) to form the NFL's top sack duo (a franchise-record 29 QB drops)

QB Joe Flacco
• Started all 16 games for the seventh-straight year, with his 112-consecutive starts ranking as the most in Ravens franchise history.
• Became the fastest player in NFL history (since 1970 merger) to toss 5 TDs (16 minutes and 3 seconds into the game), producing a franchise-record 149.7 QB rating in the 48-17 win at TB (10/12/14).
• Career bests in TD passes (27), passing yards (3,986) & fewest sacks (19).

RB Justin Forsett
• Led the NFL in yards per carry (5.4) among RBs, 20-plus-yard rushes (17) and ranked fifth in rushing yards (1,266).
• Crossed the 1,000-yard rushing plateau for the first time in his career while becoming the first Raven since Jamal Lewis (2003) to rush for 100 yards in three-consecutive games (games 10-12).
• Rushed for a career-high 182 yards (8.3 avg.) and a career-high-tying 2 TDs in the 34-27 win at NO (11/24/14), becoming the first player in team history to rush for at least 100 yards and 2 TDs in consecutive contests.

DT Timmy Jernigan
• Played in 12 games and tallied 4 sacks (-27 yards), the most QB drops by a Ravens' rookie DT in franchise history.

WR/RS Jacoby Jones
• Highlighted by his third-career 108-yard KOR-TD, Jones ranked second in the NFL in KOR average (30.6).

P Sam Koch
• Produced the NFL's No. 3 gross average (47.4) and No. 1 net average (43.3), setting the Ravens' single-season records for each.
• Has played in 144-straight games, the longest streak in Ravens history.

LB C.J. Mosley
• Earned the first Pro Bowl honor of his career, becoming the first rookie in Ravens franchise history to reach the NFL's All-Star game.
• Was the NFL's only player to post at least 125 tackles, 3 sacks and 2 INTs, joining Daryl Smith (2013) and Ray Lewis (1998, 1999, 2000 & 2001) as the only Ravens to accomplish the feat in a single season.

ILB Daryl Smith
• Registered 127 tackles, 1 sack, 1 INT and 2 FFs, becoming one of just two NFL players (Lavonte David) to post at least 200 tackles, 5 sacks, 4 INTs and 4 FFs over the past two seasons (2013-14).
• Has totaled 27 PD over the past two seasons (2013-14), including 9 in 2014, the most among NFL linebackers.

WR Steve Smith Sr.
• Became the 19th player in NFL history with 900-career receptions (now has 915) and passed Hall of Fame WR Andre Reed (13,198) for 14th on the NFL's all-time receiving yards chart (13,262).
• Posted 5 receptions for 110 yards and 1 TD (a 56-yarder) in the 48-17 victory at TB (10/12/14), becoming the fourth player in NFL history (James Lofton – 1991, Jerry Rice – 1998, Joey Galloway – 2007) with 3 TD catches of 50-plus yards in a season at age 35 or older.
• Tied the Ravens' franchise record (Mark Clayton – 2006 and Michael Jackson – 1996) with four 100-yard receiving games.
• Smith Sr. (1,065 yards on 79 catches) hit the 1,000 milestone for the eighth time in his career, marking the 11th 1K receiving season by a Raven.

WR Torrey Smith
• Led the team with a career-high 11 TD catches, becoming the first Raven with double-digit receiving scores since 1996 (Michael Jackson, 14).

OLB Terrell Suggs
• Became just the 31st player in NFL history withs 100-career sacks (now has 106.5 for -760 yards, with each ranking first in franchise history).
• Produced 12 sacks, marking the sixth double-digit sack campaign of his 12-year career, and combined with Elvis Dumervil (17) to form the NFL's top sack duo (a franchise-record 29 QB drops).
• Tied a franchise record with sacks in five-consecutive games.
• Posted his 800th tackle (now has 823, second most in team history).

K Justin Tucker
• Became the most accurate kicker in NFL history at 89.8% on 97-of-108 kicking (min. 100 attempts).
• Tucker (401 career points) became the second-fastest kicker in NFL history to reach the 400-point milestone, doing so in his 48th game. (Hall of Famer Jan Stenerud did it in 47 games.)

PLAYOFF HISTORY / NOTES

THE FLACCO PLAYOFF FILE

• In the Ravens' last 10 playoff games (since the 2010 season), Flacco is 196-of-327 for 2,563 yards, 24 TDs and 4 INTs (104.1 rating). He has led the Ravens to a 7-3 record in these contests.

• In Baltimore's last six playoff games (5-1 record), Flacco has thrown 17 TDs and 2 INTs. Completing 119 of 200 passes for 1,691 yards, he owns a magnificent 111.1 QB rating.

• Flacco has thrown at least 2 TDs in eight-straight playoff games, marking the longest streak in NFL postseason history.

• Flacco has 24 career postseason TD passes, the most in a player's first seven seasons in NFL playoff history.

• Flacco's streak of 197 passes without throwing an INT in the postseason (from 1/22/12 to 1/10/15) is the second longest in NFL playoff history (Drew Brees, 226). Joe Montana (179 from 1989-91) and Steve Young (173 from 1994-96) are third and fourth, respectively.

• Among active passers, Flacco's 25 playoff touchdown passes rank as the NFL's third most (Tom Brady - 53 and Peyton Manning - 38).

• Flacco's 3,223 career passing yards in the playoffs rank fifth most among active quarterbacks (Tom Brady - 7,345; Peyton Manning - 6,800; Drew Brees - 3,539 and Ben Roethlisberger - 3,484).

• Flacco's 10 career playoff victories (since 2008) are the most among NFL quarterbacks during this time.

• Flacco has seven career road wins in the playoffs (including two apiece in each of the 2008 and 2012 campaigns), ranking as the most by a QB in league history (Eli Manning is next with five).

COACH HARBAUGH NOTES

COACH HARBS

John Harbaugh has led the Ravens to a playoff berth in six (2008-12 and 2014) of his seven seasons in Baltimore, and in 2012, captured the franchise's second Super Bowl championship. Under his guidance, the Ravens have secured an appearance in three AFC Championships (2008, 2011 & 2012). Here are several Harbaugh quick hits:

- vs. NFC 19-9
- Playoffs Record 10-5
- Home Playoff Games 2-0
- Road Playoff Games 7-5
- Super Bowl Record 1-0

• The Ravens are one of only four teams (GB, Ind. and NE) to earn a playoff berth in six of the past seven seasons. Baltimore has also won at least one playoff game in each of those postseasons.

• The Ravens' 10 playoff wins since '08 are three more than the next teams' wins (New England & Seattle, both 7).

• Harbaugh is the only head coach in NFL history to win a playoff game in each of his first four and five seasons.

• John and his brother, Jim (formerly of the 49ers), are the only head coaches to advance to three conference title games in the first five years as NFL bosses.

• Harbaugh, Tom Landry (Cowboys) and Tom Coughlin (Jaguars/Giants) own the most road playoff victories (7) by a head coach in NFL history.

• Including playoffs (10-5), the Ravens are 82-45 since 2008 (good for the NFL's second-most wins). "Harbs" has led the Ravens to 72 reg. season wins since '08, tying (Pit.) for the NFL's third most.

RAVENS' THREE-STRAIGHT TOP 5's

In 2014, senior NFL writer Rick Gosselin of The Dallas Morning News ranked the Ravens' special teams unit No. 5 in the league in his annual comprehensive ratings system that is based on 22 categories, assigning points according to each standing — 1 for best, 32 for worst. In 2013, Gosselin also ranked the Ravens' unit No. 5, and in 2012, he awarded them the No. 2 spot (behind Minnesota).

SPECIAL FORCES

Special teams coordinator/associate head coach Jerry Rosburg, a 36-year coaching veteran, has guided a strong special teams group since arriving in Baltimore in 2008.

• Dating back to 2011, Baltimore has 7 total kick return TDs (3 PR & 4 KOR), ranking as the NFL's most.

• In 2012's Super Bowl season, the Ravens' ST units excelled. Led by Pro Bowl RS Jacoby Jones, Baltimore ranked first in the NFL in kickoff return average (27.3), also setting a team record. Jones, who became the first player ever to record dual KORs of at least 105 yards in a career, tied for a league-leading 3 kick return TDs (2 KORs & 1 PR) and averaged an NFL-best 30.7 yards per kickoff return. Jones also tied an NFL record for longest KOR in Super Bowl history with his 108-yard KOR-TD. (In 2014's Week 9 game at Pittsburgh, Jones added another 108-yard KOR-TD to his stellar resume and now has 4 total KOR-TDs over 100 yards during his career.)

• Led by Jones, the Ravens owned the NFL's best kickoff return average (28.3) in 2014. (His 30.6 mark stood No. 2 in the league.) Impressively, Baltimore has ranked in the NFL Top 5 in KOR average four times over the past seven seasons.

• In 2014, P Sam Koch produced the NFL's No. 3 gross average (47.4) and No. 1 net average (43.3), setting the Ravens' single-season records for each.

• Pro Bowl K Justin Tucker, who Rosburg scouted and helped sign as a rookie free agent, owns the NFL's second-most FGs (97) since entering the league in 2012. "Tuck" has connected on 97 of 108 FGAs to post an 89.81 success rate, the best mark in league history. He was 29-of-34 (84.4%) in 2014, with his 5 misses coming from 54, 54, 55, 57 & 64 (blocked). In 2013, Tucker set franchise records in FGs made (38) and FGs attempted (41). Going 38-of-41 on FGAs, he produced a franchise-record 140 points.

• Prior to Baltimore, Rosburg built a successful NFL special teams resume with both the Browns (2001-06) and Falcons (2007). Under his leadership, Cleveland's special teams units were consistently ranked among the NFL's best. Over a five-year span (2002-06), the Browns' special teams were ranked as the top NFL unit in Rick Gosselin's annual comprehensive special teams report.

• Four Ravens players have earned Pro Bowl honors while playing for Rosburg: ST Brendon Ayanbadejo (2008), K Billy Cundiff (2010), RS Jacoby Jones (2012) and K Justin Tucker (2013).

A STRONG RETURN

Since 2008, when Jerry Rosburg became the Ravens' special teams coordinator, Baltimore owns the NFL's No. 1 KOR average (25.4).

COORDINATORS NOTES

TRESTMAN: THE NEW O.C.

Marc Trestman was hired as the Ravens' offensive coordinator on Jan. 20, replacing Gary Kubiak. Trestman, the former Chicago Bears' head coach (2013-14), is a 30-year coaching veteran who has 19 years of NFL coaching experience, including eight as an offensive coordinator (see chart below). During his time in the NFL, he has helped teams to eight playoff appearances, two conference championship games and a Super Bowl berth (XXXVII as offensive coordinator of the Raiders).

• In the five seasons prior to his Chicago arrival, Trestman was a head coach in the Canadian Football League, leading the Montreal Alouettes to back-to-back Grey Cup Championships in 2009 and 2010. He was named the CFL's Coach of the Year in 2009.

• In its first year (2013) under Trestman, Chicago's "O" posted several records by gaining a franchise-best 6,109 net yards. The air attack also set single-season records in net passing yards (4,281), completion pct. (64.4), passing TDs (32) and passer rating (96.9). The 2013 Bears also set a franchise mark with 344 first downs gained and finished second in team history with 445 points.

• QBs Jay Cutler and Josh McCown had career seasons in 2013. McCown set franchise records in passer rating (109.0), completion percentage (66.5) and lowest INT percentage (0.4), while Cutler finished second in franchise single-season history with a 63.1 completion percentage and sixth with a career-best 89.2 QB rating.

• In 2013, Pro Bowl RB Matt Forte ranked second in the NFL with 1,339 rushing yards and was third in yards from scrimmage (1,933), while Pro Bowl WRs Alshon Jeffery & Brandon Marshall were sixth and 11th, respectively, in NFL receiving yards. (Jeffery's 1,421 yards were second in Chicago annals, and Marshall's 1,295 were fifth).

TRESTMAN'S NFL OFFENSIVE COORDINATOR ROLES

1989: Browns – Offensive Coordinator/QBs Coach

1995: 49ers – Offensive Coordinator/QBs Coach
• Note: 49ers' NFL ranks included first in points per game (28.6) and second in yards per game (380.4).

1996: 49ers – Offensive Coordinator
• Note: 49ers' NFL ranks included third in points per game (24.9) and sixth in yards per game (344.1).

1998-2000: Cardinals – Offensive Coordinator/QBs Coach

2002-03: Raiders – Offensive Coordinator/QBs Coach
• Note: In 2002, Raiders' NFL ranks included first in yards per game (389.8) and second in points per game (28.1).

RAVENS "O" SETS RECORDS

Marc Trestman takes over the reins of a Baltimore offense that in 2014 recorded the most points (409) and total net yards (5,838) in Ravens single-season history.

• QB Joe Flacco set career highs in yards (3,986) and TD passes (27), while WR Steve Smith Sr. posted 1,065 yards on 79 catches. WR Torrey Smith had 11 receiving TDs, the second most in Ravens single-season history.

• RB Justin Forsett had a career-high 1,266 rushing yards (the NFL's fifth most) and led the league in runs of 20-plus yards (a team-record 17).

PEES LEADS THE "D"

Dean Pees, an 11-year NFL-coaching veteran, was promoted to defensive coordinator on Jan. 27, 2012, after guiding the Ravens' LBs for two seasons. He is the sixth "D" coordinator in franchise history. Pees, who was New England's "D" coordinator from 2006-09, leads a Baltimore unit that in 2014 allowed the NFL's sixth-fewest points (18.9) and the eighth-fewest yards (336.9) per game. Baltimore was one of five teams (Buf., Det., KC & Sea.) to rank in the Top 8 in points and yards allowed.

Pees leads a unit that during the John Harbaugh Era (2008-14)...
• Has allowed the NFL's fewest points (18.2) and the third-fewest net yards (313.2) per game during this span.

NEWSOME'S NFL TREE

GM & executive VP Ozzie Newsome fosters a working environment that breeds standout coaches. By bringing in individuals who embrace the "Raven way," Newsome aims to create a synergy that manufactures success among scouts, coaches and players. As a result, Baltimore has had many assistants move on to become head coaches on the collegiate and NFL levels.

SMITH WAS SCINTILLATING

WR Torrey Smith excelled in 2013. With 6 receptions for 121 yards in Week 5 at Miami, Smith became the first Raven since Qadry Ismail in 1999 to post back-to-back 100-yard receiving games. (Ismail had three straight that year.)

• In 2013's Week 15 at Det., Smith (now 44) moved past Derrick Mason (35) for the franchise record in receptions of 25-or-more yards.

• Smith had 13 catches gaining 25-plus yards in 2013, just 1 shy of the franchise single-season record set by WR Michael Jackson (14) in 1996.

• Smith's 1,128 receiving yards in 2013 were the second most in Ravens single-season franchise history (Jackson – 1,201 in 1996).

TORREY'S COURAGEOUS NIGHT

WR Torrey Smith played in the 2012 Week 3 Sunday night victory over New England after his brother, 19-year-old Tevin Jones, passed away in a motorcycle accident that morning. Smith posted 6 catches for 127 yards and 2 TDs in the come-from-behind win, producing the third 100-yard game of his young career.

SMITH BIG IN SUPER BOWL RUN

In the 2012 thrilling, double-overtime Divisional Playoff win at Denver (38-35 on 1/12/13), WR Torrey Smith caught 59-yard and 32-yard TD passes, helping mark the first game in NFL playoff history that a QB (Joe Flacco) threw 2 TDs of 59-plus yards (the other being to WR Jacoby Jones on a 70-yarder). In the 2012 postseason, Smith recorded a 21.2 yards-per-catch average, reeling in 11 passes for 233 yards.

SERIOUS SCORING THREAT

No doubt, WR Torrey Smith is a big-play threat. The fourth-year wideout has 30 career TD catches (including a team- and career-high 11 in 2014). Those career scoring strikes have gained 669 yards for an average of 22.3 yards per touchdown. Here is a breakdown of Smith's career touchdowns:

IMPRESSIVE SINCE DAY ONE

In 2011's Week 11 game vs. Cin., WR Torrey Smith set a Ravens' single-season and single-game record for receiving yards by a rookie, totaling 165 yards on 6 catches (27.5 avg.). In 2011, he had 50 catches for 841 yards and a Ravens' rookie-record 7 TDs.

Smith Quick Hits:

• Smith's 26-yard TD catch with 8 seconds remaining in 2011's Week 9 at Pit. capped a 92-yard drive and sealed the Ravens' 23-20 win.

• Impressively, 5 of his 7 TD receptions in 2011 covered at least 25 yards (74, 41, 38, 36, 26, 18 and 8 yards), and he averaged a sensational 34.4 yards-per-TD catch.

• Never before has a Ravens' wideout registered dual 150-yard receiving games in a season (165 vs. Cin. and 152 at STL). Smith also posted the Top 2 receiving yards outputs by a rookie in the NFL in 2011.

JACOBY'S JAUNTS

Pro Bowler WR/RS Jacoby Jones now has 4 regular season KOR-TDs and 1 playoff KOR-TD as a Raven. In 2014's Week 9 game at Pittsburgh, he recorded another 108-yard KOR-TD, the third of his career (2 regular season and 1 in the Super Bowl). With a 30.1 career return mark in Baltimore, Jones is the Ravens' all-time leader in KOR average (listed below).

In 2012, Jones posted 2 KOR-TDs (108 yards and 105 yards) and was the NFL's only player with dual KOR-TDs. He also became the first Raven to ever have multiple KOR-TDs in a single season and career.

SPECIAL TEAMS RECEIVE HIGH MARK... THREE-STRAIGHT YEARS

In 2014, senior NFL writer Rick Gosselin of The Dallas Morning News ranked the Ravens' special teams unit No. 5 in the league in his annual comprehensive ratings system that is based on 22 categories, assigning points according to each standing — 1 for best, 32 for worst. In 2013, Gosselin also ranked the Ravens' unit No. 5, and in 2012, he awarded them the No. 2 spot (behind Minnesota).

RB Justin Forsett set a Ravens' single-season record by producing 17 runs of 20-plus yards, breaking Jamal Lewis' record of 16 in 2003. Forsett's 5.4 rushing average in 2014 also set a Ravens' single-season record.

FORSETT HUGE IN NOLA

RB Justin Forsett posted a career-high 182 rushing yards and 2 TDs on 22 carries in the 34-27 win at New Orleans (11/24/14). Here are several fast facts about his performance:

• Forsett had 115 first-half rushing yards, tying for the NFL's second most (DeMarco Murray in Week 2) in a first half this season.

• Forsett's 182 stands as the ninth-best single-game rushing output in Ravens history, while his 8.3 average ranks eighth (min. 10 attempts).

• The 182 ranked as the NFL's fourth-best single-game mark in 2014, only trailing a 201-yard game by Jonas Gray and 204-yard and 185-yard performances by Le'Veon Bell.

• Only three times before in Ravens history has a back rushed for at least 180 yards and 2 TDs in a game: Jamal Lewis (295 & 2 on 9/14/03 vs. Cle.), Jamal Lewis (205 & 2 on 12/21/03 at Cle.) and Ray Rice (191 & 2 on 1/1/12 at Cin.)

TOP TE TARGET

Two-time Pro Bowl TE Owen Daniels has made a reception in 103-straight games, tying for the longest active streak among NFL TEs. In Week 2 vs. Pit., he had his 5th-career 2-TD game, finishing with 5 catches for 28 yards. Daniels has been one of the NFL's most productive TEs since his 2006 All-Rookie season. Among active TEs, he ranks fifth in catches (433) and sixth in receiving yards (5,144) and eighth in TDs (33).

JUST FOR KICKS

Pro Bowl K Justin Tucker ranks as the NFL's most accurate kicker of all time. With the career minimum attempts set at 100, he's connected on 97 of 108 FGAs to produce an 89.81 success rate. (See further info in "Tuck's High Marks" in the right column.)

• In 2013, he earned his first Pro Bowl honor by setting team records in FGs made (38) and FGs attempted (41), with both figures tying (Stephen Gostkowski) for the NFL's most. Tucker also had a franchise-record 140 points (tied for sixth in NFL).

• In addition to his 2013 Pro Bowl, Tucker was named Special Teams Player of the Month (November) and AFC Special Teams Player of the Week three times last season. In 2014, he was named AFC Special Teams Player of the Week (Week 3) and Month (November).

• Tucker made 33-straight FGs at one point during the 2013 season, ranking as the NFL's fifth-longest streak of all time.

• His 6 FGs on 12/16/13 at Det. set a team record and were a single-game NFL high in 2013. Against the Lions, he became the first NFL kicker ever to connect from the 20-, 30-, 40-, 50- & 60-yard range in a game.

• Tucker has hit 63 of his past 66 FG attempts from under 55 yards.

• He is now 35-of-38 during his career when the Ravens are losing a game, and he's 25-of-26 when Baltimore is down by 7 points or less. The Pro Bowler is 19-of-23 in the last 2 minutes of a half during his career, and he's 36-of-39 in the fourth quarter.

QUOTH THE RAVENS

BALTIMORE FOOTBALL

John Harbaugh on what made him most proud about the Ravens' 2014 season:
"I tell the guys: It's year to year, it's game to game, it's hour to hour, it's minute to minute, it's play to play, it's second to second. That's the way the National Football League works. So while the reality is that you might think about something like the longevity, the only way you survive is by thinking one second, one play, one minute at a time. Our guys, they're not looking left, they're not looking right. They had a lot of things that could have distracted them in the course of this season, but they didn't let that happen. They ask their questions, process it, then move on. They keep the important things important. That's what I'm proud of."

TEAM QUOTES

SI.com*'s Don Banks on the Ravens' Wild Card Win at Pittsburgh:
"Granted, these Ravens never make it easy on themselves in the regular season. But they definitely know how to play in January. And John Harbaugh's battle-tested club knows what it takes to win on the road in the playoffs, silencing even the most hostile crowds with the kind of effort that hushed Heinz Field. ... Baltimore specializes in surviving in the regular season, then thriving in the postseason. Once you get into the playoffs, anything can happen, and usually does. The Ravens hang around all year, then scratch and claw to advance once the stakes are their highest."

QB Joe Flacco on the Ravens' resiliency and ability to win while battling so many injuries to starters:
"The fact that all of that has happened, and we've still been able to win games is pretty impressive. We have new people. We've had to play with rookies. We've had to bring up practice squad guys. The fact that we have that depth and the fact that we have those guys on our team is pretty impressive."

Head coach John Harbaugh on the Ravens' resiliency:
"We have a resilient bunch. They're mentally tough; they don't get caught up in the noise; they don't get easily distracted. We say, 'Turn neither to the left nor to the right – eyes straight ahead.' We have a bunch of very mature men and some young guys that are heading in the right direction because of the mature guys around them that are leading them and showing them the way."

NFL.com*'s Adam Schein on predicting the Ravens' 2014 season:
"Baltimore is a playoff team. Despite having just missed the postseason for the first time in his six years at the helm, John Harbaugh is an excellent coach. In fact, I see Harbaugh winning his third division championship. Flacco isn't feeling the heat like last year – when he signed a nine-figure contract, fresh off a Super Bowl triumph – and should enjoy a solid campaign. I believe in this organization; it's fantastic, top to bottom. This defense should not only be better than last year's unit, but better than the group from two years ago that raised the Lombardi Trophy."

John Harbaugh on what he loves about the 2014 Ravens:
"I like our team a lot. I would go so far to say I love our team. I love the way they work. I love the way they treat one another. I love the way they bleed with one another. I believe in this football team. There's no question in my mind that this team is destined for some very special things. But now you have to do it. Reputations aren't built on what you say you are going to do – they're built on what you do. And that's our job to go do it."

OLB Terrell Suggs on the Ravens facing adversity and dealing with potential distractions:
"It's not really an 'us-against-the-world' mentality, but we are a very close-knit group. ... We're a team, and we're an organization, and united we stand. We're not going to flinch. Who knows what an NFL season will bring? You've just got to band together and sit together and do it."

John Harbaugh on the Ravens' leadership council & player input:
"We voted for the leadership council the very first day [of training camp], and we have seven guys on there. But it's not just those guys [who have input]. There are guys who aren't on our 'leadership council' who are involved in decisions we make every day. We really try to involve our players in everything we're doing. That's part of the process. It's their team, in the end. They're the guys out there playing the game. They end up being huge leaders, especially by example, and those guys have done that. They've done a great job of it. Now we need to just go out and win some games and validate the things that those guys are doing."

Gary Kubiak on the high attendance during OTAs:
"It's huge, and that speaks for the organization. The guys want to be here. The way they run things, the professional way that the Ravens do things, the way John [Harbaugh] has his practices set up and treats these guys like men – they respond to it. I've always known from the outside looking in how tough this football team was and how hard they work and how hard they play. I'm proud to be a part of it now. I love the way we go about our business each and every day, and for me as a coach, that's what you want to be a part of."

TE Owen Daniels on how impressed he is with the way the Ravens' organization takes care of distractions:
"I think everyone does a great job of that – top to bottom. We have great leadership starting from the top. Coach [John] 'Harbs' [Harbaugh] does an awesome job of keeping things in perspective, and keep us focused on the right thing, keeping us focused on things that we can worry about. If you can't change it, there's no need to worry about it much if we can't do anything about it. But we're focused on what we can do. All the guys in the locker room have a good head on their shoulders, and it comes from the top down."

ProFootballTalk.com*'s Mike Florio on the 2014 Ravens:
"These are the Ravens, guided by a superb front office and excellent coaching staff. With some important additions, especially on offense, they'll be poised to get back to the postseason. When they do, the Ravens will have the physicality to succeed against the best the NFC has to offer."

PERSONNEL QUOTES

The Sporting News*' David Steele on what Ozzie Newsome means to Baltimore and its fans:
"Newsome, the only GM the Ravens have had during their 18 years in Baltimore, has produced two Super Bowl champions, drafted future Hall of Famers with his first two picks ever (Jonathan Ogden and Ray Lewis), has had only two head coaches in the last 16 years (Brian Billick and John Harbaugh), and has either employed or mentored front-office personnel all over the NFL. A franchise literally couldn't ask for more than he's done."

QUOTH THE RAVENS

John Harbaugh on his relationship with Ozzie Newsome:
"Ozzie has a term called 'scrimmaging it.' I would say that in the end, there has never been a decision made here that Ozzie and I didn't agree on in the end. It's a team effort. One of us may have to say 'OK, I acknowledge that your way may be the best way,' and we go that way. It becomes both of our decisions in the end. I know you have to have that kind of partnership between a coach and a GM to make it work. Ozzie, in my opinion, is the best in the business and a great guy to work with. I feel very blessed to be able to work with him."

Ravens assistant GM Eric DeCosta on the Ravens' development process for young draft picks:
"I think we've got a wonderful structure in place with our scouting staff and our coaches working very, very well together. When you have the scouting, the coaching and the strength and conditioning program all working together, most of our guys really do improve. I think that's been the biggest part of the success we've had."

JOHN HARBAUGH QUOTES

Ravens owner Steve Bisciotti on John Harbaugh:
"The interesting thing about John is that he may be a little bit more sure of himself, but he hasn't replaced anything that has to do with him seeking counsel. It's one thing to be more comfortable, to be sure, be more determined and be clearer. But he doesn't not talk to Ozzie [Newsome] and me and ask us for advice. That, to me, is the mark of a great leader. You can become more confident and more accomplished and more sure of yourself, but you're still just as interested in your partners' decisions. To me, that's what says to Baltimore that John is a great leader. He never replaced that inquisitiveness with assuredness."

General manager and executive vice president Ozzie Newsome on head coach John Harbaugh's attitude:
"Even when we won the Super Bowl a year ago, his evaluations centered on getting better. Not making the playoffs hurt us all. John didn't complain about it. His attitude right away was 'How do we get better and make sure this doesn't happen again?'"

ESPN.com*'s Jamison Hensley on John Harbaugh:
"John Harbaugh is at his best as a coach when his team faces adversity because he knows how to get the Baltimore Ravens in the right mindset. … Harbaugh loves sending messages to his players. He'll give them blue-collared shirts during training camp to promote their workmanlike attitude. He puts up signs throughout the facility like W.I.N. – 'What's Important Now.'"

QB Joe Flacco on how the Ravens have been able to battle through adversity this season:
"It starts with John [Harbaugh] and his attitude that he brings into the team meeting room after a loss or that he brings every day in there. It definitely starts with him and filters throughout the rest of us. So, we are able to keep that levelheadedness and keep the same mentality no matter what's happened the previous week. I think he's so comfortable and so confident in what he is doing that he can portray that to all of us and we can [follow his lead]. Let's just say adversity is losing a game. We all don't feel good coming in here on Tuesday after a loss. But when you see your head coach get up there and, while he is fiery, he is still confident about getting back to work and going out there the next week. … I think he's been doing a really good job with that, and that's with everything."

OFFENSIVE QUOTES

Head coach John Harbaugh on the 2014 impact of new offensive coordinator Gary Kubiak:
"Gary is a great coach. To try and name all the different ways that he's impacted us – how much time do you have? He's a heck of a coach. The biggest thing that I'm impressed with, among many things, is how well-built the offense is. The offense is really well-organized. It's built in such a way that it can be executed with speed and with confidence, and that's the goal, but yet have the answers you need to compete against the defenses that you're going to play against. But beyond that, the influence that you're talking about, he's obviously had a big impact. He's the coordinator on offense, and he's installing an offense that's new to the team here, but it becomes us. It becomes our offense. It becomes the Ravens' way, and he's doing a great job."

QB Joe Flacco on mastering the Ravens' 2014 offense:
"It's a lot about the way Gary [Kubiak] teaches the offense. He makes it black and white. He knows what he wants, and he knows what he doesn't want, and I'm a guy who likes to run the offense based on the way the coordinator set it up to be run. So yes, it's a nice fit, because I trust myself to make the right decision. When it's very black and white on what you're supposed to do, it makes it very easy for me to go out there and do it. You're going through your progressions and getting the ball to the guy who is open and where the ball should be, and I love that."

TE Owen Daniels on the difference between Gary Kubiak, the head coach, and Gary Kubiak, the offensive coordinator:
"I never realized how good of a teacher he was. Being a head coach, you oversee a lot of things; you're not as hands on. Now I can see him as a teacher in the meeting rooms, installing the offense, on the practice field really coaching the guys up. He's a fantastic teacher. He's going to be a head coach again someday – I guarantee it. I'm just happy to see him as an OC. We're all lucky to have him as our OC right now."

WR Torrey Smith on offensive coordinator Gary Kubiak:
"I love him; he's great. I think that he's the perfect guy for what we need, and the way he is out there, he's a great leader for us, and it's easy to buy into what he's preaching. He's a great communicator as well, and he's a guy you want to play for."

WR Steve Smith Sr. on the emergence of RB Justin Forsett:
"I think sometimes we get so enamored with evaluations. We get mock drafts or [Mike] Mayock or this guy or that guy. Mayock, Mel Kiper, you get all these guys with their slick hairdos and their ballpoint pens, and they evaluate a guy. But at the end of the day, just because a guy walks through the door and looks like Tarzan, sometimes he plays like Jane. You can't evaluate how good a player is by watching him. You've got to see what he can do. And Justin Forsett is one of those guys. He's a formula breaker."

RB Justin Forsett on surpassing expectations by having a career year in Baltimore:
"I'm sure there are still some people who are surprised. I'm OK with surprising people. … There's always going to be doubters. There's always going to be people that want to limit me and put me in boxes. It's my job to go out and try to break them."

NFL.com* and SiriusXM's Adam Schein on the Ravens' offseason addition of WR Steve Smith Sr.:
"Do I believe Smith has something to prove after getting cut by Carolina? Is water wet? ... Baltimore needed to add more talent at receiver. Frankly, the Ravens needed someone with a killer instinct, a tone-setter in practice, games and the locker room. Smith is supremely motivated. ... Smith has always played with the proverbial chip on his shoulder, but in 2014, it's a boulder."

QUOTH THE RAVENS

Sports Illustrated*'s Don Banks on how WR Steve Smith Sr. fits with his new team in Baltimore:
"Smith has never lacked for intensity or focus and a willingness to speak his mind, and those qualities have already endeared him to Ravens head coach John Harbaugh and his new Baltimore teammates. Long considered one of the NFL's ultimate competitors, Smith has fit hand in glove into the Ravens' organizational mindset. Harbaugh has admired Smith's game as far back as when he came out of the University of Utah as Carolina's third-round pick in 2001, and he's almost giddy at finally getting Smith in a Ravens uniform."

QB Joe Flacco on how much confidence he has in the Ravens' offensive line and its progression:
"I feel great behind them right now. I always feel comfortable behind them on Sunday. It's just a matter of going out there and doing it. They're playing really well; they're playing really fast. They're mentally freed up to the point where they can just go be physical. As an offensive lineman, that's a big thing, because that's your No. 1 job. When you don't get to do that, and you're sitting back and trying to sort things out, then things can go the wrong way. That's not happening."

QB Joe Flacco on the trust he has in G Marshal Yanda:
"I talk about taking pride in being out here and playing and being there for my teammates, [but] there's no better guy at that than Marshal. He's one of the toughest people that I've ever been around. You know that you can count on him, and you know that you're going to get 100 percent from him every single time. He takes it personal, and he wants to be there for the team. He's just a guy that I can trust and respect, and when you have that guy right next to you, you don't have to be too worried. You're very confident, and you feel very secure in the fact that he's there."

NFL.com*'s Bucky Brooks on QB Joe Flacco's status among NFL QBs:
"When a young quarterback wins a ring – and claims Super Bowl MVP honors in the process – he immediately joins the conversation as an elite quarterback candidate. Thus, Flacco deserves consideration, based on his ability to guide the Ravens to a championship with stellar play in the pocket (see: 11 touchdowns against zero interceptions in the 2012 postseason). With a strong career resume that includes a [72-40] regular-season record and [six] playoff berths in [seven] seasons, it is hard to dispute Flacco's effectiveness as the Ravens' starter."

SiriusXM's Rich Gannon on QB Joe Flacco:
"People don't realize this about Flacco, but he oozes confidence. He's not going to flinch. He has the utmost confidence. … One thing you respect about Joe is he doesn't make a mistake and then become conservative. That's not who Joe is."

Gary Kubiak on QB Joe Flacco:
"His physical abilities are as good as I've ever been around. He works extremely hard at what he does. Joe is a grinder, hasn't missed a day of practice, hasn't missed a rep. I'm very impressed with that. He's very competitive, yet very much under control [on] game day. I could go on and on, but he's a big-time quarterback. He's a championship quarterback."

Head coach John Harbaugh on K Justin Tucker's perfectionism:
"That's the thing about 'Tuck' that's so great – he's so motivated. He's never satisfied. He's never happy. He can kick a ball straight down the middle and come back and tell me what was wrong with it. As a coach, you feel pretty good about that. It's the guy that's missing it three yards to the right that's telling me how good a kick it was that you kind of really don't want to hear. He's a perfectionist. They all are – Sam [Koch] is, Morgan [Cox] is. That's a great group. I really think it's the best group of specialists in football."

DEFENSIVE QUOTES

OLB Elvis Dumervil on setting the Ravens' single-season sack record:
"It's just a blessing. The sacks will come, and they come in bunches. I'm truly grateful for the opportunity with a great organization, great teammates. So many people played their parts. I'm just grateful to be in a great situation to be able to take advantage of it. … I can't take all the credit. All the unselfish guys that I play with – Courtney Upshaw, give him a special shout out to help me stay fresh. We've got Pernell McPhee up the middle. Obviously, playing alongside Terrell Suggs, it really helps. I'm just with great players and taking advantage of it."

SiriusXM's Pat Kirwan on what to expect from the Ravens' defense and rookie LB C.J. Mosley:
"The Ravens' defense, which ranked 12th last season, lost four players who combined for 228 tackles, five sacks, four interceptions and 33 passes defended – and they look like a better defense right now. The reasons they look better is centered on rookie linebacker C.J. Mosley. Terrell Suggs likened him to Patrick Willis in his rookie season. Mosley can go sideline to sideline, get off blocks, has pass rush skills and drops in coverage like a veteran. … First-round pick C.J. Mosley is a star in the making."

OLB Terrell Suggs on rookie LB C.J. Mosley:
"He is playing special, phenomenal. That's why we call him half man, half amazing. I've never seen a rookie come in and play like him. There is great potential there, and it comes down to what he does with it. He plays every snap. He never comes off the field. Never."

OLB Elvis Dumervil on how he and OLB Terrell Suggs strive to be the top sack duo in the NFL:
"I've been there before twice [in Denver], so I definitely want to do that with Terrell. … The thing about it is when you have a top duo in sacks, it really helps the team overall. You have two guys really performing well. He's been doing a great job. He's been disruptive on his side. It allows me to have one-on-ones, and vice versa. So, we both can take advantage of one-on-ones. It helps our defense."

OLB Elvis Dumervil on OLB Terrell Suggs' 100-plus career sacks:
"You get to three digits, 100 sacks, I think those are yellow jacket [Hall of Fame] type of accolades. He's been a great player for a long time. When you get to almost 100 sacks, that's a hell of an accomplishment."

Texans head coach Bill O'Brien on the Ravens' pass rush:
"I think their front seven is without a doubt one of the strongest, if not the strongest front seven, we've faced all year. … They're a very stout bunch. They're very instinctive. They understand that scheme. [defensive coordinator] Dean Pees is a great coach, does a great job of putting these guys in position to make plays. They're tough, and they're good at the point of attack. They're good pass rushers."

Colts head coach Chuck Pagano on the Ravens' defense:
"When you look at it, it looks like a scary movie – 'Scary Movie 8, 9, 10, 11, 12' – whatever you want to call it. All I know is they're extremely well-coached, they're tough as damn nails, [and] you can't run the flippin' ball on them. Front to back, they have playmakers everywhere. They run to the ball, tackle well [and] cover well. Front to back, again, they have a bunch of game wreckers over there and a bunch of guys that we have a tremendous amount of respect for."

DE Chris Canty on LB Daryl Smith:
"He's a very smooth linebacker, very effective. [He] has a good feel for the game, understands the defense and can put himself and other players in position to make plays. I think that's one of the best things that he does, making sure that he coordinates everything and gets everybody set. He just has a knack for being in the right place at the right time to be able to make that big play for us. It's great to be able to line up with a guy like that who has that kind of command and has that kind of feel for the game and for the defense."

2014 COMMUNITY RECAP

Over the course of the 2014 season, Baltimore Ravens players, coaches, cheerleaders, mascot Poe and staff served the Baltimore community through a variety of outreach events and initiatives.

MILITARY

During training camp, the Ravens hosted several military groups, including C/O Bravo Company 53rd Signal Battalion. After practice, service members had the opportunity to meet Ravens players and coaching staff.

Ravens staff, alongside members of the Wounded Warrior Project, participated in a circuit workout at the Under Armour Headquarters in Baltimore. All warriors in attendance were given military-themed Ravens gear.

The Ravens continued their support for the military this season at all home games. Service members were honored through the Hometown Hero and Seats for Service Programs. The Ravens also sent care packages to troops.

PLAY 60

By hosting football clinics, Ravens players are able to connect with and teach children the fundamentals of football. LB C.J. Mosley took part in the annual Hispanic Heritage Clinic with 100 Hispanic youth.

The Ravens hosted three Play 60 assemblies at local elementary schools. Several players, including WR Torrey Smith and DT Brandon Williams, encouraged students to play for 60 minutes per day.

The Ravens hosted their annual NFL/United Way Hometown Huddle at M&T Bank Stadium. OLB Elvis Dumervil joined nearly 100 Liberty Elementary School students for a day full of fun and physical activity.

JOHN HARBAUGH SEASON-ENDING PRESS CONFERENCE

Opening statement: "Thanks for being here. I appreciate seeing you guys. Obviously, we'd rather be talking about a game that we're about to play as opposed to a season that we just finished up, but we understand there is only one team that gets to enjoy that type of success every year.

"[I have] just a couple of thoughts: I thought the team, the players did a great job. I told them after the game there probably has never been a team that I've had a chance to be a part of – in 31 years as a coach, four years as a college player, all those years in high school and junior high – that I can remember a team that really let so little get in the way of them being the best they could possibly be, and really, directed all their energy and all their efforts toward the task at hand, and helping each other be the best players and people they could be and trying to win the next game. And because of that, they were the best that they could be, we felt like, throughout the course of the season, through all the adversities, challenges and even into the last game. I'm proud of those guys for that. That's about the best thing you can say about a group of guys, coaches and players. And then the fans were just tremendous all year. Our fans are passionate. They want to see us do well; they live and die with us. I can't drive anywhere without seeing Ravens flags on cars. And whether it's a team bumper sticker or a 'Relentless' bumper sticker or whatever it is that our fans take so much pride in, when you see that as a coach – and probably our players feel the same way – you see that on a car, man, it makes you feel really good. It makes you feel proud to see people wearing their Ravens gear around town. Especially on Purple Friday, it's unbelievable. So, those things are really special [and] mean so much. It really motivates you to really want to do well and put the best team together that we possibly can going forward. Those two things are probably the things I wanted to say the most, and then open it up to your questions."

Coaches tend to speak in absolutes – you want to get better at everything, you want to win every game. But can any solace be taken out of the fact that this team took a lot of body blows and you were one of the last eight standing? (Joe Platania) "That's a great point. You never want that to be misconstrued as being satisfied in any way, but in some ways … There's a difference between being content with your effort and with the way you work together and becoming something the best you can be and being satisfied with any particular outward accomplishment. Certainly, we're not satisfied, but I'm content with the way it was approached and the effort that was put into it and what we became as a football team."

John, offensive coordinator Gary Kubiak issued a statement Sunday night that he intends to stay here. The Broncos thing was already kind of in the mix … Now that they have an opening, does that stand? Has he communicated that to you that he intends to stay? (Aaron Wilson) "As far as I know, nothing has changed. I'm not aware of any change of anything that has taken place between then and now. Of course, I was pleased as heck to hear that, to talk to Gary about that leading up to that and then that day. I told him, 'That's music to my ears.' He's very happy here. His family is happy here. All the coaches really feel good about where they're at right now. So, as far as I know, nothing has changed along those lines."

John, [there are] a lot of decisions to be made during the offseason, obviously, but do you think that not as many as a typical team would have to go through during the offseason? It doesn't seem like there has to be a lot that has to be fixed. (Dave Ginsburg) "That's a really great observation, and that's probably one of the things I'm so excited about. Talking to the team the day after the game and even in the locker room after the game, this is something that you always have your mind on as a coach. 'OK, where are we, but where are we going?' And it's pretty clear cut some areas that we have to improve in, and those areas are areas that guys that are already on the team can help us with and guys that we can potentially bring in to be a part of what we're doing and things we can do coaching-wise, obviously, to improve. We have a solid foundation of a football team underneath us right now. [We have] young guys who have turned out to be good players that are going to be good players going forward that are going to be here, and we can build on that. And that's very exciting."

Coach, you mentioned the coaching staff. There has been talk that Ravens secondary/assistant head coach Steve Spagnuolo could go and interview for the defensive coordinator job with the Giants. Where do we stand with that? (Jerry Coleman) "Steve has been given permission to interview for that job. I believe he is going tomorrow to do that interview, so we'll see how that plays out. Steve is a great coach. He's done a great job with the guys throughout the course of the season. Obviously, [he is] a tremendously experienced coach. He's been a head coach, been a coordinator, and that's not something that we would want to hold him back from as an opportunity. I don't know what is going to happen with that, but that's something that he deserves an opportunity to look at."

Along the lines of what you were talking about earlier, can you talk about the growth of some of those young players – not only the rookies, but also second-year players that really stepped up this year – and what it means going forward? (Ryan Mink) "It's interesting because after our team meeting, we had our first- and second- year guys stay in the room. I brought them down close in the first three rows there and talked to them about the unique challenges that they face and opportunities that they have going forward. And we talked about how many players come and go in the National Football League every single year. There are 400-500 new players coming into the league that have a chance to make it every year. The average lifespan of an NFL player is three-and-a-half years. Those are the guys that make teams, let alone the number of guys that play a lot longer than that. It goes to three-and-a-half as a … I don't know if it's a mean or a median, but it's an average. So, just as soon as you are in this league, sometimes you're out of it. And you have to realize that you have to improve dramatically to maintain and to build a career in this league. They have an opportunity to do that, but they have to understand that they have to be a better football player when they come back in mid-April than they are leaving here this week. And that's their challenge right now, and they're going to have to meet that challenge or things aren't going to work out well for them."

The coaching staff, are you guys inclined to coach the Pro Bowl, with the NFL wanting you guys to do that? (Aaron Wilson) "Yes, thanks. We were contacted about that late last night and we decided this morning finally to go ahead and do it. I polled our coaches and wanted to see how they felt about it, and they all were excited about coaching in the Pro Bowl. We're looking forward to doing that. Right now, we are preparing to put a couple of schemes together and go out there and coach a game."

Do you feel like there are some things that can be … You can get exposure to other players, they see you guys, and also, you get to coach your guys one more time? (Aaron Wilson) "A couple of coaches mentioned that. We don't have to stop coaching right away. We get to coach a little bit more, which is nice. Also the fact – I mentioned a few times regarding Steve Smith [Sr.] and other players – you get to know guys. I got to know Steve really well way back at his first Pro Bowl. That's always a fun part of it, getting to know some of the players around the league. And then you're right, guys [from our team], like maybe Justin Forsett is going to get in there, I'm hopeful. Kyle Juszczyk made it now, along with the other guys we know about. "

John, you obviously, every year you send players off at the end of the year [and] you want them to have a good offseason behaviorally. Did you do anything differently this year as far as exit counseling that you might've done before? Or what has happened in the last 11 months done that for you? (Peter Schmuck) "I tend to think probably what you just said is true. We've had NFL-mandated and team-sponsored counseling-type sessions throughout the course of the season. That's been something that's been attacked with enthusiasm along those lines, especially with the young guys. As we left the building, I think it was enough to do to remind the guys that how we handle ourselves is always important. Our name is the only name we have. At the same time, there's a different conduct code in place for all of us – coaches, players, front office personnel. Everybody is going to be under a different type of scrutiny from here on out. And that's a good thing. Understand that it's real, it's serious, and they need to be aware of that."

As somebody who coached Ray Lewis at the end of his career the last five years or so, can you talk a little bit about LB C.J. Mosley and his introduction in the National Football League? (Stan Charles) "By way of comparison, if I could, I would lead into this thought: Daryl Smith deserves a lot of credit as it applies to Ray Lewis, because Ray Lewis is an iconic Raven and means a lot to the city and to football. For Daryl Smith to come in and to fill those shoes, so to speak, to be the guy who replaces Ray Lewis at that position, and to play the way he has and to carry it out the way he has where we all feel so good about who he is as a person, and really to allow Ray to still flourish in his way, that says a whole lot about Daryl Smith – the kind of player he is and the kind of person he is – and that's really where it starts. C.J. Mosley is the next young, great linebacker if he chooses to do all the right things and if he gets a little good fortune. He played this year at a high, high level – a Pro Bowl level. [Inside linebackers coach] Don Martindale deserves a lot of credit for that, as does Daryl Smith. But C.J. deserves the most credit. He is a fine young man; he is a hard worker; he is very talented; he gets football. This [rookie] class is probably the smartest overall football I.Q. class that we've had, and that goes a long way in why they've done so well as a group. So, that's something we can hang our hat on a little bit going forward in the draft. Those smart guys tend to do a pretty good job as young players."

John, after the game, of course, with the Patriots' substitutions [getting] a lot of attention … A couple days removed, what are your thoughts on that? (Jamison Hensley) "My thoughts are the same as they were during the game and after the game: It was about the mechanics of the officiating. I never had an issue with the formation – never even brought that up. It wasn't about the formation at all. And I had a chance to talk to [referee] Bill Vinovich during the game, and he addressed it. He said that was right. There's a certain timing that goes with that in terms of the referee getting back in position to referee the game, and the ball was being snapped so quickly he didn't have a chance to do that. Plus, the other interesting thing is that the signal for an eligible receiver and an ineligible receiver is the same. It's a little difficult to determine what the official is actually signaling in the heat of battle when it's done that quickly. Bill was great about it; he said he would slow it down. He went over and told their sideline the same thing, and we didn't see it after that. I thought it was well handled. Talking to the league after, since then, [NFL vice president of officiating] Dean [Blandino] has told me that it's being looked at, mechanics are being looked at, and some changes will have to be made. In no way did I think it determined the outcome of the game. I was asked about it and answered it."

John, the decision to have T James Hurst start on [Saturday], even though T Eugene Monroe was active, was that about Monroe being less than 100 percent? And is Eugene still your starter moving forward, even with Hurst filling in the way he did? (Luke Jones) "It was exactly that. And we talked about that, 'Who do we put up?' Eugene wasn't 100 percent, but we felt like he was enough to be a good backup for us. If we lost one of the tackles, we'd probably rather be able to put Eugene in there at less than 100 percent than have to shuffle the offensive line around again. And credit to him for getting himself back into that kind of a position. But as far as playing the left tackle spot the whole game, where he was at, James was the better option. But Eugene is our starter going forward, and we're happy to have that be the case."

John, where do you stand with WR Torrey Smith? He was a little critical of himself [with] the way he played this year, but he did score a lot of touchdowns. He's an unrestricted free agent. Do you see him fitting in here next year? (Dave Ginsburg) "That's a good question. I love Torrey, and he's been a huge part of what we've done since he got here – great part of the community, all those things, made a ton of plays for us. We're going to have our personnel meeting tomorrow where we'll get the whole organization together – position coaches right up to [owner] Steve Bisciotti – and we'll talk about every single guy on our roster in detail. And out of that, then we'll travel down to Florida after the Pro Bowl with [general manager and executive vice president] Ozzie [Newsome] and [president] Dick [Cass] and Steve and [assistant general manager] Eric [DeCosta] and [senior vice president of football administration] Pat Moriarty, and we'll spend a lot of time looking at the salary cap and talking about our roster going forward, and we'll make some big decisions there. At that point, we'll know how we're going to approach free agency and we'll have the details worked out. Right now, I don't have that answer, because we haven't gone through those meetings yet. But personally, and I think I speak for everybody when I say we like Torrey a lot, we'd like to have him back. So, we'll just have to see how it plays out."

John, out of necessity, G/T Marshal Yanda played some right tackle. Did that open your eyes as to a possibility there when you come into those salary cap ramifications and things like that? (Stan Charles) "I'm trying to kind of stretch the question to the possible moves that would lead to. It didn't open our eyes, because we knew he could play right tackle, because he did it [in] 2010 or 2011 when he played the whole season there, so we know he can do that. But I like him at right guard. And we have Rick Wagner, we have Eugene [Monroe], we have James Hurst now – it's a pretty good group of tackles we have out there. Maybe Jah [Reid] is a guy we bring back, hopefully. So, I don't think we really need Marshal out there, and he's really good at right guard."

John, there's a bunch of head coach vacancies still to be filled, so I know there could be some juggling of various coaching staffs, and I know you addressed Ravens secondary/assistant head coach Steve Spagnuolo's [New York Giants interview]. Do you think, other than that, this coaching staff will be pretty much back in tact? (Jeff Zrebiec) "Yes, I sure hope so. I'm recruiting those guys every day. (laughter) But, like I said, guys like being here. If a coach gets a chance to be a head coach in this league, you have to be happy for them. I don't know that anything else will come up. I haven't heard of anything along those lines yet, but if something comes up, we'll just have to deal with it if it comes up."

And just to be clear about Ravens offensive coordinator Gary Kubiak, you've just not heard from him that he's changed his mind, or has he verified to you that the Denver thing hasn't changed anything? (Jeff Zrebiec) "I haven't sat down with Gary and interrogated him about it. Maybe I should. (laughter) That might be my next move. But, out of respect, he's told me he's planning on being here. Denver hasn't reached out in any way at this time, not to say it couldn't change at some point in time. If that happens, we'll cross that bridge when we get there, but I [don't] really want to put anybody on the spot like that. I want to be respectful. I'm planning on Gary being back. So, if that changes, then we'll deal with it if it comes up, but I don't anticipate that changing at this time."

John, you dealt with this a little in a general sense earlier, but as far as the secondary is concerned, do you view that as a major overhaul this offseason? Or do you think, with CB Jimmy Smith coming back, that it is not? (Peter Schmuck) "I've been trying to grapple with that myself. How do you define it? Because it's really not a major overhaul in the sense of everybody is going to be cleaned out and we're going to bring a bunch of new guys in. There are a lot of good players sitting in there because of the fact that we'll be healthy and the fact that we brought some good players in because of what happened this year. So, you have Jimmy, you have Lardarius [Webb], you have Asa [Jackson] coming back. Rashaan Melvin played really well. We brought in Chris Greenwood, who we like. Antoine Cason did a nice job for us; we'll have to make a decision on that and see where he's at in his career. Danny Gorrer is another guy that'll be coming off of surgery. So, we have some options there. We have a nice group to work with, including between two and four guys that have proven themselves as starters, even here as Ravens. And Jimmy Smith and Lardarius Webb are capable of playing at the highest level. Lardarius was really playing well at the end. We know he struggled early on. He was coming off whatever that was he had with his back and his groin that really slowed him down and didn't allow him to go through training camp and get that work in. But once he got his strength back toward the end there, he played really well. This will be the first offseason that he's had a chance to go into the offseason healthy. Jimmy will actually go into the offseason healthy. He'll be running here in a couple weeks, so he'll get a chance to get a full offseason in. Maybe four weeks might be the number off the top of my head. So, it's pretty encouraging that way, but that doesn't mean we're not going to be looking for more corners. We have the draft; we have, maybe, free agency. The same goes for safeties. We have some safeties we like, but we're looking at safeties, too. But that goes for every position."

RB Justin Forsett is kind of an interesting free agent in that he's a running back, 29 [years old], but he has had a great season. Can you talk about – I know you don't know how free agency is going to play out – just his ability moving forward to be a lead back, and how much you might think that you would like for him to fit into next year's plan? (Clifton Brown) "I would like Justin Forsett back. I don't think I'm speaking out of hand there. We want to be as strong as we can be at every position, so that doesn't mean we're not going to try to bring more backs in here either. Justin will compete just like he always has. That's one thing about Justin, he knows he's going to compete, and I would never count him out for a lead-back-type role – not for one second. He proved that. So, we'll just have to see how that plays out. But I know one thing: If we can get him back, that'd make our team stronger going into next year."

John, now that Jim Harbaugh is coaching college, does that change the kind of conversations that you guys can have in the offseason? (Gerry Sandusky) "Actually, yes. He has been a little more fun to talk to for some reason. (laughter) He has been a little more open, outgoing. I've seen him smile more. I think I saw him smile more at the Pittsburgh game than I had ever, since the Super Bowl, maybe. (laughter) But I can't wait to go see him practice spring ball. We'll probably know the Michigan players pretty well, I would guess. So, they better get some guys in there that are high draft picks."

Coach, talk a little bit about WR Steve Smith Sr. and where you think he fits back in here next year, and [would you] like to keep him here? (Bill West) "[I would] like to keep him here. Steve has expressed to me now the desire to want to come back. And one thing that Ozzie [Newsome] mentioned to him – which made a lot of sense – is to take three weeks. Take three weeks and get a chance to take a nap, figuratively, and kind of decide how you feel. But Steve was brimming with enthusiasm last time I talked to him to come back and play a role – whatever role that might be. He doesn't have to be [in] a role where he's playing every snap or anything like that, but he looks like he still has plenty left in the tank to me. So, hopefully we can … It's up to Steve, really, in the end – how he feels and if he thinks he can do it physically."

John, in terms of guys in the offseason, do you anticipate any might be having any surgeries, clean-ups, things like that? (Aaron Wilson) "Only one that I know of right now is Rashaan Melvin has a shoulder type of a deal he has to do. If everything goes well, he should be back for OTAs and for minicamp. I don't think we had any other surgeries at this time after the MRIs came in, so that's good news. It's the best we've probably been."

A lot of the offensive linemen on Sunday were talking about the promise that group as a whole had. What do you see the future as for the group with such depth and quality there? (Jon Meoli) "The future is really great for our offensive line. When we first came in here in 2008, we said, 'You start in the trenches.' A team is built from the trenches out, and we were pretty strong in the trenches this year. That's the foundation of our team, and we want to keep improving that and keep building on that, and we want to be as great as we can be on both sides of the ball up front. So, we have some really good, young players on both sides of the ball up front going forward, and we need to build on that."

Piggybacking off of that, what have you seen from the wide receiver group in terms of moving forward? (Ryan Mink) "Probably the same thing. We have some good, young wide receivers, which is, I think, your point. Between Kamar Aiken and guys you don't even know about, like Jeremy Butler, who didn't get a chance to play this year, we're pretty excited. Of course, Marlon [Brown] has done such a great job. [Michael] Campanaro in there … We have to get Campanaro to the point where he can really be durable through the whole season and get those hamstrings right. That's something he's going to go to work really hard on [in] the offseason. Paired with the possibility of bringing Torrey [Smith] back or Steve Smith Sr. back … There are other guys in there that we aren't going to get a chance to talk about. It doesn't mean we won't add a guy or two, but that's a good, young corps of wide receivers."

TE Dennis Pitta, is there anything on his future? (Brett Hollander) "No, nothing new. I talked to Dennis [Pitta] today, and he's going to see a couple specialists this week. [We are] looking forward to seeing what they say. But he was working out today, so that seemed to be positive to me."

You said before that you anticipate TE Dennis Pitta coming back. Has any indication changed that thought process? (Jamison Hensley) "No. No indication has changed that. I will say that I'm cautiously optimistic because of the injury. We all sit in here [and] all of us would be [like], 'OK, is this going to be good?' We want to make sure he's going to be totally healthy, totally safe as much is as reasonable in football to make sure that hip is sound and everything before our doctors would ever clear him. In the end, it will be up to the doctors and Dennis to determine that."

Change happens in this league as far as coaching staffs throughout the league, but it seems like even nowadays coaches that are winning 11, 12 games are not coming back. Does it make you appreciate what you have here and what you've built here this far? (Jamison Hensley) "Yes. I don't know if there's any way to comment on what goes on around the league with other situations. Obviously, I'm pretty close to the one with my brother [Jim Harbaugh], which I'm still at a loss about in a lot of ways. But I'm happy for him, because I think he's going to be in a great situation going forward. But it does make me count my blessings. And I think all of our coaches … I know they feel that way, because here we are in an organization that from top to bottom is as well run with as good of people as you could ever hope for. So, I thank God. I'm grateful for it every single day. And it starts with [owner] Steve Bisciotti, the kind of person he is and the kind of leader he is. He wants to help. He wants to make us better. He wants to be in your corner. That's the kind of leader, boss that makes a difference. [General manager/executive vice president] Ozzie [Newsome], [president] Dick [Cass], [individuals] throughout the organization – whether it's our trainer, our equipment man –everybody in this organization does such a phenomenal job. So, I guess the short answer is, 'Yes.'"

John, I know you touched on the secondary a bit, but how impressed were you with S Will Hill. You guys used a lot of safeties at various points, but second half of the year he really emerged as an every-down guy. (Luke Jones) "Will Hill did [impress]. He has a lot of talent, and it's something that we always knew. He also has a great love for the game. He learned our defense throughout the course of the season, which it's not easy to do that. We have a tough defense. We do a lot of good stuff back there. But he was running the show pretty well back there toward the end of the year. Having the offseason, having the OTAs and the minicamp and the training camp is only going to really help him tremendously, as far as being a really good safety for us. And I'll say this: We put it on his plate a little bit. We're challenging him for the next three or four months. 'Are you going to come back a better player than you were when you left here in January, and is that slate going to be clean?' We fully expect it to be. He just had a baby. He's doing great with his family, and we fully expect him to do a great job with that, and we're going to try to help him anyway we can with that."

Coach, going back to the Pro Bowl, you're an intense guy and it has been known as kind of a laissez-faire game. How are you going to motivate these guys to play hard? (Jerry Coleman) "We did talk about that today. We're going to implore them … Not that we're going to ask them to play … Well, be careful, because they're going to play hard. We're going to implore them to play a little harder than the other guy [and] see where that takes us. But I saw the game last year. I thought it was really well-played. They pick teams now, and they have some celebrity ex-players who are running the show on that. So really, as coaches, we just coach the game. But I'm going to have a good halftime speech ready. I'm going to motivate them. You know there's a difference between the winning share [of money] and the losing share, right?" (Reporter: "That will be part of the speech?") "That's a big motivator for anybody." (Reporter: "And the practices will be intense?") "Live-scrimmage type contact?" (Reporter: "Yes. Will you let me sit down and watch in Phoenix?") "To sit down and watch practice? Sure, you can sit at that one. (laughter) They won't be very long, I promise you. I promise [the players] they won't be very long."

Has your threshold of tolerance for, shall we say youthful indiscretion, has that changed going into this offseason from previous years? (Peter Schmuck) "That's an organizational decision. It's hard for me to stand up here and say that my threshold is the determining factor, because it's not. It's something that we all get together and talk about as a group. The landscape has changed, without question. And I think the threshold is … How did you word it?" (Reporter: "Threshold of tolerance.") "I think it's changed, without question. And I told the guys that. That's something that they need to understand, and I don't think that's a bad thing at all. It's a privilege to play in the National Football League. It's a privilege to be a part of the Ravens. There's a standard to uphold there, and we expect them to [do that]. We've always expected them to do that. But I would think that it will be a little bit shorter leeway, maybe than it's been in the past."

Has [owner] Steve Bisciotti sent that message, too? (Peter Schmuck) "We haven't had that conversation yet, but I'll bet that's something we talk about when we go down to Florida, and that'll be probably laid out. We'll have that conversation; we'll talk about all that. But I know Steve believes that. I believe Steve feels that way, and Ozzie [Newsome] does too, and Dick [Cass] does, too. I don't really want to speak for anybody else, but I guess I'm saying the answer is probably, 'Yes' to that."

John, when you go to Steve's house in Florida, I know you mentioned you'd talk about salary cap stuff. But just your general feeling, do you feel like there's a little more flexibility this year? I know you guys have got a lot of free agents, but do you feel like you have a little more flexibility to work? (Jeff Zrebiec) "I do. I do get that feeling. Until I see the hard numbers, I really don't want to trust a feeling on that. But it might be a little better in that sense."

And speaking specifically about a certain player, how important is it to work something out with NT Haloti Ngata, similar to what you guys were able to do with OLB Terrell Suggs last year? (Jeff Zrebiec) "I think everybody knows the answer to that, but I don't really want to get into too many specific situations right now until we come back with a plan. But, we all know the answer to that question."

Coach, are there certain rules, now that you've gone through this season, that you'd like the competition committee to really look at, that you maybe struggled with this year? (Bill West) "We just got the survey on that today, so I haven't had a chance to really lay that out off the top of my head. But there are some things that we're going to look at. I think the replay thing is something that we've been in favor of for three years now, of reviewing helmet-to-helmet-type hits on defenseless players. That's got a chance to go to review. I think more than that even has a chance to be included in review; we're for that. We voted for that last year. Pass interference, I think, needs to be looked at. Hopefully that's something they'll take a good, hard look at. Those types of things that we've talked about with the competition sub-committee will all get looked at, and I'm sure there will be some changes."

John, you mentioned the offensive line. Your thoughts on [offensive line coach] Juan Castillo and the job he did developing the young guys? (Aaron Wilson) "Juan did a great job. I feel like Juan is a great coach; I feel like he's always been a great coach. He's a hard worker, [and] nobody takes it more personally than Juan. He did a great job this year."

S Matt Elam said last week that he didn't initially handle his reduced snaps well, and sort of gained a new perspective and learned to deal with it a little better. Have you seen growth there heading into the offseason? (Jeff Zrebiec) "His practice production and effort did improve. And he's never done a bad job with that. He's always … But I think he was more consistent over the last six or seven weeks than he had been at any time since he'd been here before. He really put a lot of effort into it and did improve as a player because of that."

John, I saw you in the locker room after the game having a pretty intense conversation with WR Steve Smith Sr. Talk about his outward competitiveness and what that brought to this team. (Stan White) "Like a lot of real competitive guys, sometimes it takes a moment for people around to understand, 'Where is this coming from?' He had mentioned that he feels like he fits in here. So, I think that we're good about that as a group, team and an organization – of taking people where they're at, trying to look at their heart – and I think everybody felt like, 'Hey, this guy is a competitor. This guy is a fighter. He's a battler. He wants to do well and it matters to him.' And as long as the guys felt that way about him … I know they felt good about him, and they felt that way about him all year. That's how I feel about him. I think he was a huge addition to our team this year. We wouldn't have had the season we had without Steve Smith on our team this year, and I'm really happy for him for that – proud of him and happy he's on our team."

GAME 1: BENGALS 23, RAVENS 16

Baltimore (0-1) · Cincinnati (1-0)

Sunday, September 7, 2014 · 1:02 PM ET · M&T Bank Stadium · Baltimore

Weather: 74°, Partly Cloudy, Wind N 8 mph · Attendance: 70,925 · Time: 3:14

After fighting back to earn a 16-15 advantage with 5:46 left in the game, the Ravens were stunned by the visiting Bengals when QB Andy Dalton hit WR A.J. Green with a 77-yard TD throw to give Cincinnati the opening-day victory. Green's TD came just 48 seconds after the Ravens took the fourth-quarter advantage when QB Joe Flacco heaved an 80-yard TD throw to WR Steve Smith Sr. (That was the longest throw of Flacco's career and tied the longest for Smith Sr.) Baltimore survived a shaky first half, holding the Bengals out of the end zone while the offense struggled. K Mike Nugent's 5 field goals (49, 22, 28, 46 and 38 yards) gave the Bengals a 15-0 halftime advantage. The Ravens' best opportunity to score in the opening two quarters came at the end of the first half, but Flacco was sacked at the Bengals' 19 as time expired. Cincinnati held the ball for more than 20 of the first 30 minutes. Ravens RB Justin Forsett, who rushed for 70 yards, put his team on the board in the third quarter with 13-yard TD scamper. K Justin Tucker's 38-yard FG brought the Ravens within 5 at 15-10 at the 10:28 mark of the fourth period. After the Ravens forced a punt, Flacco scrambled left to hit the sprinting Smith Sr. for the TD. Smith Sr. was caught inside the 10-yard line, but threw down the defender to the ground and continued to the end zone. The 2-point conversion failed. On the ensuing second play from scrimmage, Dalton hit the streaking Green for the decisive TD. Dalton threw to WR Mohamed Sanu for the 2-point conversion to make the final margin 23-16. Battling to the end, the Ravens drove from their own 12 to the Bengals' 16 when Flacco was sacked on consecutive plays to finish Baltimore's opportunities. The two QBs combined for 100 passes with Dalton completing 25 of 38 for 308 yards and Flacco throwing 62 times and connecting on 35 of those for 345 yards. Green finished with six catches for 131 yards, while TE Dennis Pitta grabbed 10 for 83, and Smith Sr. had seven for 118.

GAME 2: RAVENS 26, STEELERS 6

Baltimore (1-1) • Pittsburgh (1-1)

Thursday, September 11, 2014 • 8:28 PM ET • M&T Bank Stadium • Baltimore

Weather: 82°, Partly Cloudy, Wind WNW 6 mph • Attendance: 71,181 • Time: 2:56

In what John Harbaugh called "a complete team victory," the Ravens stopped the Steelers, 26-6, at M&T Bank Stadium. Baltimore ran for 157 yards, including 96 on 22 carries by RB Bernard Pierce, while QB Joe Flacco completed 21 of 29 for 166 yards with a pair of touchdown passes to TE Owen Daniels. Meanwhile, the defense held Pittsburgh to two field goals, turning over the Black and Gold three times (leading to 10 points.) It marked the first time since 2006 that the Steelers had not scored a TD in a game against Baltimore. Ravens K Justin Tucker added 4 field goals in 4 attempts. The Ravens stole the ball on the game's opening drive when LB Daryl Smith caused a WR Justin Brown fumble, which was recovered by DE DeAngelo Tyson. Flacco then directed a 12-play, 85-yard drive that ended with a 2-yard TD dart to Daniels for a 7-0, first-quarter lead. Baltimore followed that with another 12-play series in the second quarter that ended with a 30-yard Tucker FG for a 10-0 advantage. A 25-yard K Shaun Suisham FG made the halftime score 10-3. The Steelers closed the gap to 10-6 in the third period after a 43-yard Suisham FG. After that, it was all Ravens. Flacco completed the third 12-play scoring drive of the game when he hit Daniels with a 1-yard TD pass to start the fourth quarter (17-6). While the Ravens didn't add another TD despite gaining the red zone three times in the final stanza, they did produce three more Tucker FGs (23, 22, and 20 yards.) Ravens RB Justin Forsett added 56 yards (8 carries) while WR Steve Smith, Sr. made 6 catches for 71 yards. Pittsburgh QB Ben Roethlisberger completed 22 of 37 passes for 217 yards, including 7 for 90 to WR Antonio Brown. OLB Elvis Dumervil posted 2 sacks on the night, upping his career total to 75 QB drops, while DT Haloti Ngata recorded the 4th INT of his career.

GAME 3: RAVENS 23, BROWNS 21

Baltimore (2-1) · Cleveland (1-2)

Sunday, September 21, 2014 · 1:02 PM ET · FirstEnergy Stadium · Cleveland
Weather: 71°, Partly Sunny, Wind W 23 mph · Attendance: 67,407 · Time: 2:57

The Ravens won in Cleveland when K Justin Tucker hit a 32-yard field goal on the game's final play to secure a 23-21 Ravens victory. The win featured outstanding play in the fourth quarter by all three phases of Baltimore's team. Along with Tucker's game-winner, CB Asa Jackson blocked a Browns' FGA by former Raven Billy Cundiff in the final quarter. Later, P Sam Koch blasted a 58-yard punt that put the Browns on their 7-yard line with 2:19 left in the contest. On the Browns' final two possessions, the Ravens' defense, with the injured OLB Terrell Suggs, DE Chris Canty and CB Lardarius Webb watching from the sidelines, produced back-to-back three-and-outs. Finally, on offense, QB Joe Flacco hit WR Steve Smith Sr. with a 32-yard strike to the Browns' 13 to set up the winning FG. This hard-fought game saw five lead changes and started with a 3-0 Ravens' advantage on the first series with a 38-yard Tucker FG. Cleveland came right back with a scoring drive of its own, taking a 7-3, first-quarter lead on a 1-yard RB Terrance West run. The Ravens held a 10-7 halftime lead after a 9-yard Flacco-to-FB Kyle Juszczyk TD pass. The third quarter featured three long TD drives, two by the Browns. Cleveland opened the second half with a 9-play, 80-yard drive that ended with a 14-yard RB Isaiah Crowell TD run that gave the Browns a 14-10 edge. Baltimore came right back with an 8-play, 80-yard series that finished with rookie RB Lorenzo Taliaferro's 1-yard TD plunge. A 4-yard QB Brian Hoyer-to-WR Miles Austin TD put the Browns back into the lead (21-17) after three quarters. Tucker's 21-yard FG brought the Ravens within 1 point at 21-20 before his game-winner at the end. Taliaferro (91) and RB Justin Forsett (63) combined for 154 rushing yards while starter RB Bernard Pierce sat out with an injury. TE Dennis Pitta left the game with a hip injury and was taken to a Cleveland hospital.

GAME 4: RAVENS 38, PANTHERS 10

Baltimore (3-1) · Carolina (2-2)

Sunday, September 28, 2014 · 1:02 PM ET · M&T Bank Stadium · Baltimore
Weather: 78°, Sunny, Wind S 4 mph · Attendance: 71,218 · Time: 2:55

QB Joe Flacco threw 3 touchdown passes, including 2 to WR Steve Smith Sr., in the Ravens' 38-10 romp over the Carolina Panthers at M&T Bank Stadium. Smith Sr., playing against the team for which he played the past 13 seasons, grabbed 7 receptions for 139 yards. (Smith Sr., 35, became the oldest player in NFL history to produce over 400 yards in the first four games of a season – 429 on 25 catches.) The Ravens produced a season-high 454 yards, which included Flacco's 22-of-31 performance for 327 yards and a Ravens' franchise-record 137.4 QB rating. After a scoreless first quarter that saw the Panthers hold the ball for 11:05, the Ravens jumped to a 7-0 lead on a Flacco-to-Smith Sr. 61-yard TD throw. Smith caught the ball after it deflected off the hand of TE Owen Daniels. Carolina tied the game at 7-7 when QB Cam Newton (14-of-25 for 197 yards) threw a 28-yard TD strike to rookie WR Kelvin Benjamin. Baltimore then jumped to a 21-7 halftime lead after RB Justin Forsett scored on an 11-yard sprint, and Smith Sr. caught his second TD pass (21 yards) of the game. The Ravens extended the lead to 28-7 in the third quarter on a Flacco-to-WR Torrey Smith 24-yard TD. A K Graham Gano 37-yard field goal closed the gap to 28-10 before the Ravens produced 10 more points in the fourth quarter (RB Lorenzo Taliaferro's 1-yard run and K Justin Tucker's 30-yard field goal). Flacco was not sacked for the third-straight game, and the Ravens ran for 127 yards (66 by Forsett and 58 by Taliaferro). Baltimore set a team mark for third-down conversions, converting 10 of 13 (76.9%). The Ravens improved to 12-1 at home vs. the NFC during the Harbaugh/Flacco Era (2008-14), while Baltimore improved to 21-2 in home games against the NFC from 2002-14.

GAME 5: COLTS 20, RAVENS 13

Baltimore (3-2) · Indianapolis (3-2)

Sunday, October 5, 2014 · 1:03 PM ET · Lucas Oil Stadium · Indianapolis

Weather: 53°, Cloudy, Wind S 14 mph · Attendance: 65,258 · Time: 3:08

The Ravens' three-game winning streak came to an end in Indianapolis when the Colts held on for a 20-13 victory. Baltimore QB Joe Flacco, who had not been sacked in three-consecutive games, was taken down four times, one more than he was sacked in the season's initial four contests. The Ravens converted just one of 11 third-down conversions, while the Colts held the ball for nearly 39 minutes of the game. Indy QB Andrew Luck threw 1 TD pass and ran for another, finishing the game with 32 completions on 49 attempts for 312 yards and 2 INTs (DT Haloti Ngata and ILB C.J. Mosley). WR Steve Smith Sr. fumbled on the Ravens' first play of the game, leading to a 38-yard K Adam Vinatieri FG and a 3-0 Colts' lead. Early in the second quarter, the Ravens had a third-and-1 at the Colts' 3-yard line, where Indianapolis stopped Baltimore on consecutive plays. Luck then directed a 20-play drive that ended with another Vinatieri FG (34 yards) and a 6-0 lead. K Justin Tucker's 52-yard FG at the end of the first half made the score 6-3. A third-quarter Luck-to-TE Dwayne Allen 13-yard TD gave the Colts a 13-3 advantage. Tucker's 27-yard FG brought the Ravens within a TD (13-6) early in the fourth quarter. Luck once again navigated a long (80 yards) drive that ended with the athletic QB sprinting 13 yards for a score (20-6). The Ravens roared back with an 11-yard RB Justin Forsett TD run that made the score 20-13 with 7:16 left in the final quarter. There were 7 turnovers in the game, 4 by the Colts and 3 by Baltimore. Flacco was 22-of-38 for 235 yards with 1 INT. Forsett rushed 6 times for 42 yards and caught 7 passes for 55 more. Colts WR T.Y. Hilton caught 9 for 90 yards, while WR Reggie Wayne added 7 catches for 77 yards. RB Ahmad Bradshaw carried the ball 15 times for 68 yards.

GAME 6: RAVENS 48, BUCCANEERS 17

Baltimore (4-2) · Tampa Bay (1-5)

Sunday, October 12, 2014 · 1:02 PM ET · Raymond James Stadium · Tampa Bay
Weather: 84°, Cloudy, Wind NE 6 mph · Attendance: 60,041 · Time: 3:01

The Ravens scored on their first six possessions, taking a 38-0 second-quarter lead in a 48-17 romp over the host Buccaneers. QB Joe Flacco threw touchdown passes at the end of each of the Ravens' first 5 possessions to become the fastest (16 minutes and 3 seconds) QB in NFL history to toss a quintet of TDs at the start of a game. The 5 TDs thrown was a personal best for Flacco, who completed 21 of 29 passes for 306 yards and a franchise-record 146.0 QB rating. WR Torrey Smith started the game with a pair of TD catches (15 and 9 yards). WR Kamar Aiken (17 yards) and rookie WR Michael Campanaro (19 yards) followed with touchdown catches to give Baltimore a 28-0, first-quarter lead. A Flacco-to-WR Steve Smith Sr. TD play (56 yards) gave the Ravens a 35-0 lead that they extended to 38-0 at the half on K Justin Tucker's 46-yard field goal. (Those are the most points ever in the first half by Baltimore.) Tampa finally got on the board in the third quarter when K Patrick Murray made a 47-yard FG, and QB Mike Glennon found WR Mike Evans with a 17-yard TD strike. The Ravens came right back with an 11-play, 80-yard TD drive that ended with RB Bernard Pierce's 4-yard rush to the end zone to make it 45-10 after three quarters. Glennon added another TD throw in the final period (3 yards to WR Louis Murphy). Tucker's 49-yard FG provided the final 48-17 margin. Flacco threw to eight different receivers, including Smith Sr., who grabbed 5 passes for 110 yards. Torrey Smith caught 4 for 51 more, while RB Justin Forsett, who entered the game with a league-leading 5.9 yards per carry average, ran 14 times for 111 yards. Glennon was 24-of-44 for 314 yards with 1 interception (CB Jimmy Smith), and he was sacked 5 times, including 1.5 by OLB Elvis Dumervil. The offensive line did not allow a sack for the fourth time in 2014.

GAME 7: RAVENS 29, FALCONS 7

Baltimore (5-2) · Atlanta (2-5)

Sunday, October 19, 2014 • 1:02 PM ET • M&T Bank Stadium • Baltimore
Weather: 54°, Sunny, Wind NW 14 mph • Attendance: 71,184 • Time: 3:00

Leading 20-0 after three quarters, the Ravens stopped the visiting Falcons, 29-7. The Ravens started the game by forcing the Falcons to a three-and-out and then scored on their first possession when QB Joe Flacco found TE Owen Daniels for a five-yard touchdown and a 7-0 lead. It was 17-0 at the half after RB Bernard Pierce scored on a one-yard plunge (set up by a Flacco-to-WR Torrey Smith 20-yard completion) and K Justin Tucker's 38-yard field goal. The Ravens' "D" held the Falcons to just 61 yards and 0-for-7 on third down in the first two quarters. Tucker made another 38-yarder in the third quarter (20-0). Atlanta finally got on the board with 7:12 left in the game when QB Matt Ryan hit WR Roddy White with a four-yard TD strike. The Ravens' defense scored after OLB Terrell Suggs sacked Ryan for a safety with 3:44 remaining in the contest to make the margin 22-7. Baltimore added a touchdown with 1:46 left when Flacco threw a long beauty to Smith for a 39-yard TD. It came on a fourth-and-9 play, and the Ravens were without a long snapper. (Morgan Cox left the game moments earlier with a torn ACL.) While the Ravens turned the ball over 3 times – 2 Flacco INTs and a WR/RS Jacoby Jones muffed punt – they did not allow any points after those changes of possession. Twice in the third quarter, the Falcons went for it on fourth down in Ravens territory (32- and 33-yard lines), and Baltimore stopped each of those attempts. For the second game in a row, the Ravens produced five sacks, including two each by OLBs Elvis Dumervil and Pernell McPhee. McPhee forced a fumble with one of his QB takedowns that was recovered by Dumervil. This was the third victory over NFC South teams in 2014, and the Ravens have outscored this division 115-34, including a 76-7 first-half margin.

GAME 8: BENGALS 27, RAVENS 24

Baltimore (5-3) • Cincinnati (4-2-1)

Sunday, October 26, 2014 • 1:02 PM ET • Paul Brown Stadium • Cincinnati

Weather: 62°, Sunny, Wind W 6 mph • Attendance: 55,711 • Time: 2:59

For an instant, it appeared the Ravens had come back for a dramatic victory over the host Bengals when QB Joe Flacco and WR Steve Smith Sr. connected on an 80-yard TD that would have given Baltimore a 31-27 lead with 32 seconds left in the game. However, a late flag that signaled an offensive pass interference call on Smith Sr. nullified the score. Instead, the Ravens dropped a 27-24 decision to Cincinnati, which grabbed first place in the AFC North at the midpoint of the season. The Bengals opened the game with a 9-play, 80-yard TD drive that ended with a 1-yard QB Andy Dalton score. The Ravens bounced back in the second quarter with 2 K Justin Tucker field goals, 45 and 50 yards, to make the score 7-6 at the half. Cincy added 10 points in the third quarter after a pair of Flacco INTs. The Bengals stole the ball on the initial series of the period when LB Emmanuel Lamur intercepted a pass intended for WR Torrey Smith to give the ball to the Bengals at their 49. Eight plays later, RB Giovani Bernard ran 1 yard for a TD and a 14-6 lead. Flacco was then intercepted again, this time by CB Adam Jones, who returned it to the Ravens' 18. Baltimore's defense stiffened, limiting the Bengals to K Mike Nugent's 32-yard FG. The Ravens roared right back, finishing a 9-play, 79-yard drive with a RB Lorenzo Taliaferro 10-yard TD sprint to make the score Cincinnati 17-14 after three quarters. Early in the fourth, the Bengals extended the lead to 20-14 on a 33-yarder by Nugent. The defense then stood up for the Ravens. DT Haloti Ngata strip sacked Dalton with LB Daryl Smith grabbing the fumble and racing 38 yards to the Bengals' 8-yard line. Taliaferro added his second TD on the next play with an 8-yard scamper to the end zone to give the Ravens a 21-20 advantage. On the Bengals' next play, Dalton threw an INT to LB C.J. Mosley, who ran 5 yards to the Bengals' 43. Tucker followed with an impressive 53-yard FG to give the Ravens a 24-20 lead with 4:05 remaining. The Bengals rallied with a 10-play, 80-yard drive that ended with another 1-yard Dalton TD, making the score 27-24.

GAME 9: STEELERS 43, RAVENS 23

Baltimore (5-4) • Pittsburgh (6-3)

Sunday, November 2, 2014 • 8:30 PM ET • Heinz Field • Pittsburgh

Weather: 38°, Clear, Wind WNW 6 mph • Attendance: 63,971 • Time: 3:39

QB Ben Roethlisberger threw 6 touchdown passes in the Steelers' 43-23 victory at Heinz Field, avenging an early-season loss to the Ravens. (Baltimore beat Pittsburgh, 26-6, at M&T Bank Stadium in the season's second week.) The Ravens jumped out to a 7-0 lead on QB Joe Flacco's 35-yard TD to WR Torrey Smith in the first quarter, but 2 second-quarter turnovers by the Ravens turned the game around for the Steelers. Baltimore's first mistake came on rookie RB Lorenzo Taliaferro's fumble at the Ravens' 27-yard line that was recovered by CB Brice McCain. Five plays later, Roethlisberger found RB Le'Veon Bell in the end zone for a 5-yard scoring play. On the Ravens' ensuing possession, Flacco was intercepted by LB Jason Worilds, who ran the ball to the Ravens' 30. Roethlisberger then hit WR Martavis Bryant with a 19-yard TD for a 14-7 Steelers' advantage. After a 46-yard K Justin Tucker field goal (14-10), Big Ben completed his third TD pass of the quarter. This one was for 47 yards to WR Markus Wheaton, making the score 22-10 at the half. After a scoreless third quarter, Roethlisberger threw 3 fourth-quarter TD passes: 54 yards to WR Antonio Brown, who finished the game with 11 catches for 144 yards, 18 yards to Bryant and 33 yards to TE Matt Spaeth. KOR Jacoby Jones' 108-yard kickoff return for a TD gave the Ravens some hope early in the final period, closing the gap to 29-17 with 13:47 remaining. Flacco added a 1-yard TD to rookie TE Crockett Gillmore as the Ravens battled to the end. Roethlisberger finished 25-of-37 for 340 yards and was sacked 3 times, while Flacco was 30-of-45 for 303 yards. TE Owen Daniels caught 6 for 53 yards, while RB Justin Forsett and WR Steve Smith Sr. each grabbed 5 passes for 67 and 36 yards, respectively.

GAME 10: RAVENS 21, TITANS 7

Baltimore (6-4) • Tennessee (2-7)

Sunday, November 9, 2014 • 1:03 PM ET • M&T Bank Stadium • Baltimore
Weather: 57°, Partly Cloudy, Wind W 7 mph • Attendance: 70,914 • Time: 2:55

After falling behind 7-0 in the first quarter to the visiting Titans, who were coming off their bye week, the Ravens rebounded to secure a 21-7 victory. While the Titans produced 2 long drives and 142 total yards in that initial period, the Ravens ran just 4 plays for 8 yards. By halftime, Baltimore's offense had just 86 total yards and no third-down conversions. Meanwhile, the Ravens' defense came alive, holding the Titans to 8 punts and an interception on their 9 possessions for the remainder of the game. Tennessee produced just 45 yards in the second half, the fifth fewest ever allowed by the Ravens in the final two quarters. Until the Titans' final possession of the game, the Ravens held them to 7 three-and-outs and 1 four-and-out over almost three quarters (since the end of the first.) Titans rookie QB Zach Mettenberger was sacked 5 times, 2.5 by OLB Elvis Dumervil and 1.5 by OLB Terrell Suggs. The Titans opened the game with a 15-play, 79-yard drive that ended when RB Shonn Greene fumbled (forced by DT Haloti Ngata) at the 1-yard line, and the ball was recovered by Baltimore's DE Lawrence Guy. Tennessee came right back after a Ravens' three-and-out with a 9-play, 58-yard series that ended with Mettenberger hitting RB Leon Washington for a 3-yard touchdown and a 7-0 lead. The Ravens tied the game at 7 in the second quarter on RB Justin Forsett's 9-yard TD scamper around the left side. Forsett's 11-yard sprint to the end zone in the third quarter gave the Ravens a 14-7 lead. That was increased to 21-7 at the 13:09 mark of the fourth quarter after QB Joe Flacco hit WR Torrey Smith with a 32-yard TD strike. The Ravens ended the game with dual kneel downs at the Titans' 1-yard line. Flacco finished with 16 completions on 27 attempts for 169 yards. Smith caught 5 of those for 75 yards, while Forsett led all rushers with 112 yards on 20 carries. Mettenberger was 16-of-27 for 179 yards, including 4 for 53 yards to WR Kendall Wright, while rookie RB Bishop Sankey rushed 17 times for 58 yards. The Ravens produced their 10th-straight home victory in November, the NFL's longest current streak.

GAME 11: RAVENS 34, SAINTS 27

Baltimore (7-4) · New Orleans (4-7)

Monday, November 24, 2014 · 8:30 PM ET · Mercedes-Benz Superdome · New Orleans
Weather: Indoors · Attendance: 73,373 · Time: 3:08

RB Justin Forsett scored 2 TDs while rushing for 182 yards on 22 carries (8.3 ypc) in the Ravens' 34-27 victory over the Saints in New Orleans. The game opened dramatically with the Saints driving to the Ravens' 1-yard line after an end-around, 67-yard sprint by WR Joseph Morgan, who was caught from behind by CB Lardarius Webb. After failing to get into the end zone on three plays, Saints RB Mark Ingram tried to penetrate the inside of Baltimore's line, but he was pushed back by DT Haloti Ngata for a 2-yard loss on the fourth-and-goal play. QB Joe Flacco then directed a 9-play, 97-yard drive that ended when he hit WR Steve Smith Sr. with a 15-yard scoring strike for a 7-0 Ravens' lead. New Orleans made it 7-7 in the first quarter after QB Drew Brees found TE Jimmy Graham for a 10-yard TD. The Ravens then drove to the Saints' 1, but a fumble by FB Kyle Juszczyk on the first play of the second quarter stopped the drive. On the Ravens' next possession, Forsett scored his first TD of the contest, a 13-yard scamper that gave the Ravens a 14-7 lead. A 20-yard K Shayne Graham field goal brought the Saints within 4 (14-10). New Orleans then completed the first half with an 8-play, 81-yard series that ended with a Brees-to-WR Marques Colston 26-yard TD to give the Saints a 17-14 advantage. The Ravens came back in the third quarter to grab a 24-17 lead on K Justin Tucker's 31-yard FG and a S Will Hill 44-yard TD off an INT of Brees. Tucker increased that Ravens' lead to 27-17 on an impressive 55-yard FG 4 minutes into the fourth quarter. Graham's 34-yarder with 4:26 left in the game brought the Saints within a TD (27-20). Baltimore then consumed nearly four minutes before Forsett's second TD, a 20-yard sprint off the left side, giving the Ravens a 34-20 lead. Brees and Graham combined for a final Saints' score (two yards) with 40 seconds left in the contest.

GAME 12: CHARGERS 34, RAVENS 33

Baltimore (7-5) · San Diego (8-4)

Sunday, November 30, 2014 · 1:02 PM ET · M&T Bank Stadium · Baltimore

Weather: 54°, Partly Cloudy, Wind SSW 8 mph · Attendance: 71,060 · Time: 3:24

Despite taking a 10-point, fourth-quarter lead (30-20), the Ravens lost to the visiting Chargers, 34-33, at M&T Bank Stadium last Sunday. Behind QB Philip Rivers, San Diego scored three final-period TDs to secure the hard-fought victory. Rivers' 1-yard toss to WR Eddie Royal with 38 seconds left provided the winning margin. Rivers threw 3 TD passes, completing 34 of 45 for 383 yards, including 11 for 121 to WR Keenan Allen, who scored 2 TDs. The Chargers converted 9 of 11 third downs, the best ever against the Ravens, going 7-for-7 in the first half. The Ravens started impressively in the short week following a Monday night victory at New Orleans. Baltimore led 10-0 after scoring on the game's opening series on a QB Joe Flacco 16-yard dart to WR Torrey Smith and a 33-yard K Justin Tucker field goal. The Chargers responded with a Rivers-to-Allen 12-yard TD to make the score 10-7 after one quarter. Stalled in the red zone, the Ravens increased the lead to 16-7 on a pair of Tucker FGs (21 and 29 yards). Chargers K Nick Novak's 52-yarder at the end of the second quarter pushed the score to 16-10 at the half. Novak's 26-yard FG made it 16-13 before Smith caught his second TD of the day (10 yards) from Flacco, giving the Ravens a 23-13 advantage entering the final quarter. RB Ryan Mathews' 14-yard TD run brought the Chargers within 3 (23-20) early in the fourth. The Ravens responded with a determined 12-play, 79-yard drive that ended with a 1-yard Flacco TD dive for a 10-point, 30-20 lead. San Diego came right back with Rivers leading a six-play, 77-yard TD series that ended with a second scoring toss (23 yards) to Allen. That made the score 30-27, Baltimore, with 3:40 left in the contest. WR/RS Jacoby Jones took the following kickoff 72 yards to the Chargers' 30, but Baltimore could only score a fourth Tucker FG (31 yards) to lead 33-27 with 2:22 remaining. Rivers and the Chargers roared back, finishing with Royal's 1-yard TD catch that followed a pass interference call on CB Anthony Levine that put the ball on the Ravens' 1-yard line. (The Ravens were called for 14 penalties in the game.) RB Justin Forsett produced his third-consecutive 100-yard rushing effort (24 for 106 yards), running for over 1,000 yards for the first time in his career.

GAME 13: RAVENS 28, DOLPHINS 13

Baltimore (8-5) • Miami (7-6)

Sunday, December 7, 2014 • 1:02 PM ET • Sun Life Stadium • Miami

Weather: 76°, Sunny, Wind NW 10 mph • Attendance: 70,244 • Time: 3:05

Despite a slow first-quarter start, the Ravens rallied for a 28-13 come-from-behind victory at Miami. The Dolphins jumped to a 10-0 lead, limiting Baltimore to three-straight three-and-outs and just 22 yards in the initial period. In the final three quarters, the Ravens out-gained the hosts 425 to 161 yards, outscoring the Dolphins 28-3. Miami took a 3-0 lead with a K Caleb Sturgis 46-yard field goal. After another three-and-out for the Ravens, the Dolphins scored their only touchdown of the game on QB Ryan Tannehill's 3-yard bullet to WR Brian Hartline. The Ravens closed the gap to 10-7 at the end of the first half with an impressive 12-play, 97-yard scoring drive that ended with a 1-yard QB Joe Flacco strike to WR Steve Smith Sr. The Ravens made it back-to-back scoring series when they took their first possession of the third quarter to the end zone for a 14-10 lead on a Flacco to WR Kamar Aiken 13-yard TD. Miami closed the gap to 14-13 early in the fourth quarter on Sturgis' second FG (34 yards). The Ravens responded with another long TD drive, this one ending with a RB Justin Forsett 2-yard TD that made the score, 21-13. Controlling the game and the clock, the Ravens assembled another TD series on their next possession. Flacco's 1-yard TD plunge provided the final 28-13 margin. Flacco finished with 25 completions on 33 attempts and threw 1 interception to go with his pair of TD throws. Smith Sr. caught 7 passes for 70 yards, while Aiken, who grew up just a few miles from Sun Life Stadium, grabbed 6 for 65. Forsett rushed 13 times for 71 yards, part of the 183 yards gained on the ground for Baltimore. The Ravens sacked Tannehill 6 times, including 3.5 by OLB Elvis Dumervil, who set a new team mark with 16 sacks. OLB Terrell Suggs added 1.5 QB takedowns. The victory put the 8-5 Ravens a half game behind the 8-4-1 Bengals in the tight AFC North race.

GAME 14: RAVENS 20, JAGUARS 12

Baltimore (9-5) · Jacksonville (2-12)

Sunday, December 14, 2014 · 1:02 PM ET · M&T Bank Stadium · Baltimore
Weather: 47°, Cloudy, Wind NW 3 mph · Attendance: 70,801 · Time: 3:07

The Ravens stayed in the playoff hunt with their fourth victory in the last five games with a hard-fought 20-12 victory over the Jaguars at M&T Bank Stadium. Baltimore jumped to a 7-0, first-quarter lead on a blocked punt by S Darian Stewart that was picked up by WR Kamar Aiken, who raced 11 yards to the end zone. Key to the Ravens' win was the relentless pressure by the defense, which sacked Jaguars QB Blake Bortles a season-high 8 times. When Baltimore's offense struggled in the first half, the defense stepped up, producing 4 sacks that helped limit Jacksonville to 4 field goals. (The Ravens were 0-for-6 on third downs and rushed for just 13 yards in the first half.) The aggressive Jaguars tried a number of "tricks," succeeding with an onside kick in the second quarter and a fake punt in the third. However, each time the Ravens' defense stepped up to those sudden changes without giving up points. After the Ravens took the early lead, Jaguars K Josh Scobee made 3-consecutive field goals, 2 from 53 yards and the other from 45. After K Justin Tucker's 22-yard FG gave the Ravens a 10-9, second-quarter lead, Scobee hit from 45 yards to make the score 12-10 at the half. The Ravens took the lead (17-12) for good in the third quarter when QB Joe Flacco hit TE Owen Daniels with a 3-yard TD toss. Tucker, who missed two 54-yarders in the game, made one from 33 yards in the fourth quarter to make the final margin, 20-12. Flacco completed 20 of 30 for 221 yards, including 5 for 66 to WR Marlon Brown. (Flacco surpassed 25,000 passing yards for his career.) WR Steve Smith Sr., who became the 19th player in league history to reach 900 catches, also grabbed 5 passes for 37 yards. The oft-sacked Bortles was 21-of-37 for 210, with 1 interception (S Jeromy Miles). WR Cecil Shorts III led Jacksonville with 6 receptions for 76 yards, while WR Allen Hurns also caught 6 for 70. The Ravens' sack fest featured 2.5 by OLB Terrell Suggs, 2 by rookie DT Timmy Jernigan, 1.5 by OLB Pernell McPhee and 1 each from OLB Elvis Dumervil and rookie ILB C.J. Mosley. The Ravens limited the Jaguars to 248 total yards.

GAME 15: TEXANS 25, RAVENS 13

Baltimore (9-6) · Houston (8-7)

Sunday, December 21, 2014 · 1:02 PM ET · NRG Stadium · Houston

Weather: Indoors (roof closed) · Attendance: 71,771 · Time: 3:30

Giving up control of their playoff destiny, the Ravens lost at Houston, 25-13. QB Joe Flacco threw 3 interceptions, leading to 13 Texans' points. (Flacco, who was 21-of-50 for 195 yards, had thrown only 1 pick in the last five games.) Flacco was just 3-of-18 for 27 yards with 2 INTs in the first half. Houston QB Case Keenum, who was signed from the Rams' practice squad earlier in the week, earned his first NFL victory in nine starts. The Ravens' defense, which faced "short" fields all day, limited the Texans to just 1 touchdown. That came on a halfback pass for 5 yards by Pro Bowl RB Arian Foster to TE C.J. Fiedorowicz. Foster added 96 yards on 25 carries. K Randy Bullock set a Texans' record with 6 field goals. His first 3 (35, 25 and 30 yards) gave Houston a 9-0 lead, which was extended to 16-0 on Foster's TD toss. Houston's defense set a franchise record by allowing Baltimore only 31 first-half yards. The Ravens closed the gap to 16-7 in the third quarter when Flacco found WR Torrey Smith in the end zone for an 8-yard score. Three more Bullock FGs (20, 39 and 33 yards) pushed the lead to 25-7 with 9:55 remaining in the game. Another Flacco-to-T. Smith TD, this one covering 20 yards, made the score 25-13 (the 2-point conversion failed) with 5:56 left in the final quarter. T. Smith finished with 5 catches for 59 yards, while WR Steve Smith Sr. added 5 for 49. The Ravens' leading rusher, RB Justin Forsett, was limited to 19 yards on 10 runs. Keenum completed 20 of 42 for 185 yards and was not sacked. (The Ravens had produced 14 QB takedowns in the previous two games.) WR Andre Johnson caught 6 for 65, including the 1,000th reception of his career. DE J.J. Watt made eight tackles, with 1 sack.

GAME 16: RAVENS 20, BROWNS 10

Baltimore (10-6) · Cleveland (7-9)

Sunday, December 28 , 2014 · 1:02 PM ET · M&T Bank Stadium · Baltimore
Weather: 54°, Cloudy, Wind WNW 5 mph · Attendance: 71,070 · Time: 3:05

For the sixth time in his seven seasons as Baltimore's head coach, the Ravens earned the playoffs under John Harbaugh in a come-from-behind 20-10 victory over the visiting Browns. The Ravens trailed 10-3 entering the fourth quarter before both the defense and offense stepped up to make the difference before the raucous soldout crowd. The game started to turn on the Ravens' first possession of the final quarter when QB Joe Flacco led an eight-play, 73-yard drive that ended with a 28-yard K Justin Tucker field goal to make the score 10-6. After holding Cleveland to a three-and-out, the Ravens' offense exploded with back-to-back Flacco-to-WR Torrey Smith completions that ended with a 16-yard touchdown play. After that, the defense made a stand, forcing a punt after three Browns' plays gained zero yards. Six plays later, Flacco found WR Kamar Aiken for a 2-yard TD and a 20-10 Ravens' advantage. Flacco was 8-of-9 for 161 yards in the fourth quarter when he produced a perfect QB rating (158.3). The Browns, without an incentive to make the playoffs, were valiant throughout the contest. Cleveland's defense held the Ravens to 126 yards in the first half, which finished in a 3-3 tie. The Browns' then held the ball for just under 12 minutes of the third quarter when they took a 10-3 lead on RB Terrance West's 2-yard TD run. That score was set up by a 49-yard QB Connor Shaw-to-WR Taylor Gabriel completion. Shaw, who began the week on the Browns' practice squad, completed 14 of 28 for 177 yards with 1 INT (CB Lardarius Webb). Flacco was 22-of-36 for 312 yards and a 107.6 QB rating. WR Steve Smith Sr. grabbed 8 of those for 90 yards, while T. Smith added 4 for 83. RB Justin Forsett produced his fifth 100-yard rushing effort of the season, finishing with 119 yards on 17 carries. The Ravens produced 419 yards on offense, helping set a team single-season mark for total yards (5,838). With the 20 points, Baltimore eclipsed the franchise mark of 398 points (2012) scored with 409. Earning the playoffs for the 10th time in the last 15 years, the Ravens moved over the .500 mark for postseason appearances (10 of the 19 seasons the Ravens have existed.)

WILD CARD: RAVENS 30, STEELERS 17

Baltimore (11-6) • Pittsburgh (11-6)

Saturday, January 3, 2015 • 8:15 PM ET • Heinz Field • Pittsburgh

Weather: 48°, Cloudy, Wind S 10 mph • Attendance: 62,780 • Time: 3:10

Behind an offensive line that included two rookie starters (LT James Hurst and RG John Urschel), the Ravens put together scoring drives of 80, 70, 57 and 69 yards in their 30-17 victory over the Steelers. Meanwhile, Baltimore's defense was stout, holding Pittsburgh out of the end zone for three quarters and sacking QB Ben Roethlisberger 5 times. OLB Terrell Suggs and S Darian Stewart each intercepted "Big Ben" passes, while Stewart added a FR (TE Heath Miller). But, more than any other player, the Ravens' victory was inspired by QB Joe Flacco, who threw 2 TD passes while completing 18 of 29 passes for 259 yards without an INT. (Flacco now has 13 TD throws without an INT in his last five playoff games, with the first four of those coming in the team's 2012 Super Bowl XLVII Championship run.) Flacco averaged 14.3 yards per completion in this playoff triumph. It was the Ravens' first postseason win in Pittsburgh after losses in 2001, 2008 and 2010. Dominating time of possession (12:03 to 2:57), the Steelers took a 3-0 first-quarter lead on a 45-yard K Shaun Suisham FG. The Ravens gained a 7-3, second-quarter advantage after RB Bernard Pierce's 5-yard TD run completed an 8-play, 80-yard drive. After Suisham (22 yards) and K Justin Tucker (28) exchanged FGs, Suisham made the score 10-9 at the half with his 47-yarder. The Ravens dominated the third quarter when Flacco produced a perfect QB rating (158.3), leading his teammates on two scoring drives. The first resulted in a 48-yard Tucker FG and the second came on a Flacco to WR Torrey Smith 11-yard TD dart to give the Ravens a 20-9 lead. Flacco escaped the pocket on that throw, moving left and finding Smith in the corner of the end zone. After a RB Justin Forsett fumble, Roethlisberger brought the Steelers within 5 (20-15) on a 6-yard throw to WR Martavis Bryant. (The 2-point conversion failed.) After a 52-yard Tucker FG put the Ravens up 23-15, Flacco struck again following the Suggs INT. Baltimore's QB hit rookie TE Crockett Gillmore with a 21-yard TD throw to give the visitors a 30-15 lead with 7:56 left in the game. Pittsburgh blocked a P Sam Koch punt out of the end zone for the game's final points.

The Ravens' bid to play in their fourth AFC Championship game in seven seasons came to an abrupt end in Foxborough with a narrow 35-31 defeat. New England erased two 14-point Baltimore leads to win the battle, becoming the first team in NFL history to accomplish the feat. The Ravens jumped out to a 7-0 lead on a QB Joe Flacco-to-WR Kamar Aiken 19-yard touchdown pass on the game's opening drive. On Baltimore's next series, after forcing a Patriots' punt, Flacco engineered an 11-play, 79-yard drive, culminating with a WR Steve Smith Sr. 9-yard touchdown catch. QB Tom Brady then answered with a 4-yard touchdown rush to make the score 14-7. With 3:37 to go in the first half, New England tied the game with a Brady-to-WR Danny Amendola 15-yard touchdown. But, following a LB Daryl Smith interception, Baltimore re-gained the lead on a TE Owen Daniels 11-yard touchdown catch from Flacco with :10 left in the half. Pro Bowl RB Justin Forsett, who rushed for 129 yards in the game, caught a 16-yard pass from Flacco for a touchdown to open the scoring in the second half, giving the Ravens a 28-14 edge. New England stormed back again, however, scoring TDs on its next two drives. First, a 5-yard TE Rob Gronkowski slant pass made it 28-21, and then WR Julian Edelman, a former QB at Kent State, connected with Amendola on a 51-yard touchdown, Edelman's first-career NFL touchdown pass. Flacco then threw his first postseason interception since 2011, snapping a streak of 197-consecutive attempts without a pick (the second-long mark in NFL postseason history). The Baltimore defense, which held New England to a franchise-postseason-low 14 rushing yards (on 13 carries) stopped the Patriots on the next series. Then, the Ravens, who were 4-of-5 in the red zone, had to settle for a K Justin Tucker 25-yard field goal early in the fourth quarter, giving Baltimore a 31-28 advantage. New England took its first lead of the game on a Brady-to-WR Brandon LaFell 23-yard pass at the 5:13 mark, which ended up being the decisive scoring play. Flacco and the Ravens had two more chances, but a S Duron Harmon interception in the end zone and a deflected Hail Mary pass sealed the Patriots' victory.

2. DeMarco Murray . . . 15
3. Four players 9

RB Justin Forsett set a Ravens' single-season record by producing 17 runs of 20-plus yards, breaking Jamal Lewis' record of 16 in 2003. Forsett's 5.4 rushing average in 2014 also set a Ravens' single-season record.

FORSETT HUGE IN NOLA

RB Justin Forsett posted a career-high 182 rushing yards and 2 TDs on 22 carries in the 34-27 win at New Orleans (11/24/14). Here are several fast facts about his performance:

- Forsett had 115 first-half rushing yards, tying for the NFL's second most (DeMarco Murray in Week 2) in a first half this season.
- Forsett's 182 stands as the ninth-best single-game rushing output in Ravens history, while his 8.3 average ranks eighth (min. 10 attempts).
- The 182 ranked as the NFL's fourth-best single-game mark in 2014, only trailing a 201-yard game by Jonas Gray and 204-yard and 185-yard performances by Le'Veon Bell.
- Only three times before in Ravens history has a back rushed for at least 180 yards and 2 TDs in a game: Jamal Lewis (295 & 2 on 9/14/03 vs. Cle.), Jamal Lewis (205 & 2 on 12/21/03 at Cle.) and Ray Rice (191 & 2 on 1/1/12 at Cin.)

RUN RAVENS RUN

Led by RB Justin Forsett, whose career-high 1,266 rushing yards ranked fifth in the NFL, Baltimore produced 126.2 ground yards per game (eighth most in 2014). The Ravens tallied an NFL-high 24 runs of 20+ yards (led by Forsett's league-best 17) and gained 113 rushing first downs (the NFL's fourth most).

Rushing Quick Hits:

- Forsett's 5.4 rushing average ranked No. 1 among all NFL RBs.
- Forsett's 17 runs of 20+ yards were a league high and set a Ravens' single-season franchise record, besting Jamal Lewis' 16 from his 2003 Offensive Player of the Year campaign.
- Forsett was the NFL's only RB to rush for at least 1,200 yards and average 5.0 yards per carry.

PRO BOWLERS

Five Baltimore Ravens were selected to the Pro Bowl in 2014. OLB Elvis Dumervil (fourth), RB Justin Forsett (first & originally a first alternate who replaced Arian Foster), LB C.J. Mosley (first, the only Ravens rookie to ever earn a Pro Bowl) and G Marshal Yanda (fourth) were tabbed to play in the NFL's All-Star game. Four Ravens were named first alternates: RS Jacoby Jones, FB Kyle Juszczyk, P Sam Koch and OLB Terrell Suggs.

RAVENS RANTS: JACOBY JONES

JACOBY'S JAUNTS

Pro Bowler WR/RS Jacoby Jones now has 4 regular season KOR-TDs and 1 playoff KOR-TD as a Raven. In 2014's Week 9 game at Pittsburgh, he recorded another 108-yard KOR-TD, the third of his career (2 regular season and 1 in the Super Bowl). With a 30.1 career return mark in Baltimore, Jones is the Ravens' all-time leader in KOR average (listed below).

In 2012, Jones posted 2 KOR-TDs (108 yards and 105 yards) and was the NFL's only player with dual KOR-TDs. He also became the first Raven to ever have multiple KOR-TDs in a single season and career.

SPECIAL TEAMS RECEIVE HIGH MARK... THREE-STRAIGHT YEARS

In 2014, senior NFL writer Rick Gosselin of The Dallas Morning News ranked the Ravens' special teams unit No. 5 in the league in his annual comprehensive ratings system that is based on 22 categories, assigning points according to each standing — 1 for best, 32 for worst. In 2013, Gosselin also ranked the Ravens' unit No. 5, and in 2012, he awarded them the No. 2 spot (behind Minnesota).

RAVENS RANTS: HALOTI NGATA

THE DOMINANT DT

One of the NFL's most disruptive forces, DT Haloti Ngata was named to his fifth Pro Bowl in 2013. Perhaps the NFL's most athletic defensive tackle, Ngata stops the run (528 career tackles), rushes the passer (25.5 career sacks) and can even drop into coverage (an impressive 5 career INTs).

Baltimore has a history of strong run defense, and with Ngata's help since 2006, has been consistently sturdy on the ground.

RUSH "D" NUMBER TO RAVE ABOUT

19

Consecutive seasons the Baltimore Ravens' defense has held opponents to a 4.0 rushing average or less, the NFL's longest such streak. (The Ravens ranked third with a 3.6 mark in 2014.)

GET 'EM OUT

Since Dean Pees was named the Ravens' "D" coordinator in 2012, Baltimore has forced the NFL's second-most three-&-outs (153). The Ravens produced the league's second-most three-and-outs (54) in 2013, and in 2014, had 43 (tying, NYG, for ninth in the NFL). Baltimore's 23.9 defensive three-and-out percentage ranked sixth.

RAVENS RANTS: TORREY SMITH

DEEP THREAT

WR Torrey Smith ranks first in Ravens franchise history in yards-per-catch average, posting a 16.9 mark over the four seasons in which he's caught 213 passes for 3,591 yards and 30 TDs (including a team-high 11 in 2014). Dating back to his rookie campaign (2011), Smith's 16.9 average ranks fifth in the NFL.

SMITH WAS SCINTILLATING

WR Torrey Smith excelled in 2013. With 6 receptions for 121 yards in Week 5 at Miami, Smith became the first Raven since Qadry Ismail in 1999 to post back-to-back 100-yard receiving games. (Ismail had three straight that year.)

• In 2013's Week 15 at Det., Smith (now 44) moved past Derrick Mason (35) for the franchise record in receptions of 25-or-more yards.

• Smith had 13 catches gaining 25-plus yards in 2013, just 1 shy of the franchise single-season record set by WR Michael Jackson (14) in 1996.

• Smith's 1,128 receiving yards in 2013 were the second most in Ravens single-season franchise history (Jackson – 1,201 in 1996).

TORREY'S COURAGEOUS NIGHT

WR Torrey Smith played in the 2012 Week 3 Sunday night victory over New England after his brother, 19-year-old Tevin Jones, passed away in a motorcycle accident that morning. Smith posted 6 catches for 127 yards and 2 TDs in the come-from-behind win, producing the third 100-yard game of his young career.

SMITH BIG IN SUPER BOWL RUN

In the 2012 thrilling, double-overtime Divisional Playoff win at Denver (38-35 on 1/12/13), WR Torrey Smith caught 59-yard and 32-yard TD passes, helping mark the first game in NFL playoff history that a QB (Joe Flacco) threw 2 TDs of 59-plus yards (the other being to WR Jacoby Jones on a 70-yarder). In the 2012 postseason, Smith recorded a 21.2 yards-per-catch average, reeling in 11 passes for 233 yards.

SERIOUS SCORING THREAT

No doubt, WR Torrey Smith is a big-play threat. The fourth-year wideout has 30 career TD catches (including a team- and career-high 11 in 2014). Those career scoring strikes have gained 669 yards for an average of 22.3 yards per touchdown. Here is a breakdown of Smith's career touchdowns:

IMPRESSIVE SINCE DAY ONE

In 2011's Week 11 game vs. Cin., WR Torrey Smith set a Ravens' single-season and single-game record for receiving yards by a rookie, totaling 165 yards on 6 catches (27.5 avg.). In 2011, he had 50 catches for 841 yards and a Ravens' rookie-record 7 TDs.

Smith Quick Hits:

• Smith's 26-yard TD catch with 8 seconds remaining in 2011's Week 9 at Pit. capped a 92-yard drive and sealed the Ravens' 23-20 win.

• Impressively, 5 of his 7 TD receptions in 2011 covered at least 25 yards (74, 41, 38, 36, 26, 18 and 8 yards), and he averaged a sensational 34.4 yards-per-TD catch.

• Never before has a Ravens' wideout registered dual 150-yard receiving games in a season (165 vs. Cin. and 152 at STL). Smith also posted the Top 2 receiving yards outputs by a rookie in the NFL in 2011.

RAVENS RANTS: TERRELL SUGGS

T-SIZZLE

OLB Terrell Suggs, the 2011 Defensive Player of the Year, owns a franchise-record 106.5 sacks. In 2014's Week 15 win vs. Jacksonville, Suggs posted his fifth-straight game with a sack, tying a franchise mark he (2013), Paul Kruger (2012) and Adalius Thomas (2005 & 2006) hold. Suggs had 12 sacks in 2014, producing the sixth double-digit sack campaign of his 12-year career. Suggs is one of three NFL players (DeMarcus Ware and Jared Allen) to have 10+ sacks in four of the past five seasons.

RAVENS RANTS: JUSTIN TUCKER

JUST FOR KICKS

Pro Bowl K Justin Tucker ranks as the NFL's most accurate kicker of all time. With the career minimum attempts set at 100, he's connected on 97 of 108 FGAs to produce an 89.81 success rate. (See further info in "Tuck's High Marks" in the right column.)

• In 2013, he earned his first Pro Bowl honor by setting team records in FGs made (38) and FGs attempted (41), with both figures tying (Stephen Gostkowski) for the NFL's most. Tucker also had a franchise-record 140 points (tied for sixth in NFL).

• In addition to his 2013 Pro Bowl, Tucker was named Special Teams Player of the Month (November) and AFC Special Teams Player of the Week three times last season. In 2014, he was named AFC Special Teams Player of the Week (Week 3) and Month (November).

• Tucker made 33-straight FGs at one point during the 2013 season, ranking as the NFL's fifth-longest streak of all time.

• His 6 FGs on 12/16/13 at Det. set a team record and were a single-game NFL high in 2013. Against the Lions, he became the first NFL kicker ever to connect from the 20-, 30-, 40-, 50- & 60-yard range in a game.

• Tucker has hit 63 of his past 66 FG attempts from under 55 yards.

• He is now 35-of-38 during his career when the Ravens are losing a game, and he's 25-of-26 when Baltimore is down by 7 points or less. The Pro Bowler is 19-of-23 in the last 2 minutes of a half during his career, and he's 36-of-39 in the fourth quarter.

On Jan. 12, 2013, the Ravens traveled to Denver for a Divisional Round matchup in which they knocked off the AFC's top seed in a 38-35 double-overtime thriller. CB Corey Graham (above) picked off two QB Peyton Manning passes, one of which he returned 39 yards for a touchdown.

In the Wild Card round at New England (1/10/10), RB Ray Rice ran 83 yards for a touchdown on the opening play from scrimmage, the second-longest rush in NFL postseason history. Rice finished the day with a Ravens' postseason record 159 rushing yards, adding 2 TDs, en route to a 33-14 victory.

Note: Average opponent drive start DOES NOT include onside kicks or kickoffs at the end of a half unless either kickoff is returned for a touchdown. All other kickoffs (returned kickoffs, fair catches, touchback and kickoffs out of bounds) are included. Kickoffs resulting in the kicking team retaining possession are not included.

ADJ KO: Adjusted kickoffs are used to compute the Avg. Team Drive Start.

I20: The number of drives that start inside (not including) the 20 yd line.

Note: Average team drive start DOES NOT include onside kicks or kickoffs at the end of a half unless either kickoff is returned for a touchdown. All other kickoffs (returned kickoffs, fair catches, touchback and kickoffs out of bounds) are included. Kickoffs resulting in the kicking team retaining possession are not included.

ADJ KO: Adjusted kickoffs are used to compute the Avg. Team Drive Start.

I20: The number of drives that start inside (not including) the 20 yd line.

The New Noll

Chuck Noll stayed 23 years in Pittsburgh. With 10 playoff wins in seven years and a patient boss, John Harbaugh could be on his way to a similar stature in Baltimore. The Ravens coach would consider it 'the ultimate accomplishment'

PITTSBURGH — I got the craziest thought covering the Ravens' wild-card win over the Steelers on Saturday night at Heinz Field: John Harbaugh has a chance to be the modern-day Chuck Noll. He's not the only one, of course. His rivals in the AFC North, Mike Tomlin and Marvin Lewis, have been with their franchises longer. But Harbaugh, who on Saturday leads the Ravens into their fourth playoff game at New England in the last six seasons, has so many things going for him. Such as:

He wins. Starting from scratch with a rookie quarterback, Joe Flacco, in 2008, Harbaugh's Ravens have averaged 11.7 wins per year, including playoffs.

He wins in January. In his seven years as coach of the Ravens, Baltimore has won 10 postseason games, including five in a row entering Saturday's AFC divisional game at New England. Ten postseason wins in the last seven years is twice as many as any other team in the league since 2008. His 10-4 lifetime postseason record is the same as Bill Walsh's career mark.

He has an owner likely inclined to be patient. I've got an apocryphal story later, but Steve Bisciotti does not want to hire another coach—if he can help it. He's a believer in the Rooney/Mara school of patience with coaches, even after firing a fairly successful one, Brian Billick, to make his marriage with Harbaugh.

He has a 29-year-old quarterback who is one of the best playoff quarterbacks in football. Flacco turns 30 on Jan. 16, and eight of his last nine postseason games have been 95-plus rating performances. Flacco has won five playoff games in a row, throwing 13 touchdowns and no interceptions in them. He's got the kind of Joe Cool vibe about him that some of the best had. One other thing to like: He shows up. Baltimore has played 126 games since drafting Flacco in 2008; Flacco has started them all.

His front office is well-trained in the art of staying the course. Harbaugh is 52. Bisciotti is 54. Baltimore's ace GM, Ozzie Newsome, is 58, but the GM-in-waiting, Newsome's trusted assistant who keeps turning down GM interviews elsewhere to stay in Baltimore, Eric DeCosta, is 43. Flacco, at 30 in 2015, probably has seven to nine good years left, based on his health and aversion to injury. The owner, the GM, the quarterback … those are a head coach's three best friends. And Baltimore is rock-solid at the trio of spots for a few years, minimum.

His rapport with players helps. When Harbaugh became coach, he did a few unpopular things with respected veterans like Ray Lewis, taking away some of the freedoms they had under Billick. But as a career assistant coach who'd never had anything handed to him, he preferred to treat everyone as equals. "Coaching is about relationships," said Steve Smith Sr., the 35-year-old wide receiver, "and John has one-on-ones with everybody on the team, all the time. Breakfasts, lunches, dinners, on the practice field."

Of course, the challenge to be another Noll is not just coaching the team. It's having an owner who doesn't sway in the breeze when public opinion is beating him up. Noll coached the last 12 years of his career without winning even a conference championship. It's hard to imagine any coach, anywhere, lasting 12 seasons in one spot without getting to a Super Bowl.

But think of everything Harbaugh has going for him. He also knows how to lead, and he's a smart person, and though he has some bully tendencies, Bill Parcells did too. Sean Payton does. Vince Lombardi did. That's part of coaching.

Noll lasted 23 years in Pittsburgh. Could Harbaugh last another 13, 15 years in Baltimore? That would mean he'd have finished a third of his career now. He seems like such a fixture, but to think he could still be coaching the Ravens until he's 67 in 2030, is difficult to comprehend in this 24/7 football life. Noll, in his day, could disappear and sail or study wine for weeks in the offseason, and he had no interest in some of the things that trap so many coaches today. Noll never did a commercial in 23 years. "Give those things to the players," he'd say. Harbaugh's no fame hound, but the demands on a coach's time dwarf what they were when Noll made the Steelers famous.

I met Harbaugh in a corner of the Ravens' locker room Saturday night. I said to Harbaugh after the 30-17 win over the Steelers: I could see you being a Chuck Noll, lasting a long time in Baltimore. Could you?

"Personally," he said, "that would be the ultimate accomplishment. The Chuck Nolls, the Don Shulas … What those guys did, that would be the ultimate thing, because having success over a long period of time, the way the National Football League is set up nowadays, that would be an incredible thing. That would be … that would just be something, really."

He was surprised by the question, and he got a little emotional answering it.

* * *

When Bisciotti decided to fire Billick after the 2007 season, he gathered his Ravens braintrust in a team conference room in the Baltimore suburb of Owings Mills. "We're going to do this right," Bisciotti said. "We're going to do it so we don't have to do it again for a long time. Whoever we pick, we're going to grow with this guy."

So the Ravens hired Harbaugh at 44. For 18 of the previous 19 years, he'd been a special teams coach, with the University of Cincinnati, Indiana University and the Philadelphia Eagles. The Ravens not only hired a relative unknown to be their head coach; they hired a special-teams man. Bisciotti sat in the room with Harbaugh and saw the charisma and the leadership and the football intelligence and the work-within-the-system guy he wanted as a head coach.

I was thinking about Bisciotti's decision Saturday night. The Ravens had six defensive backs out for the season with injuries. On this night, for a playoff game against a quarterback who strafed them for six touchdown passes the last time they played, the Ravens dressed eight defensive backs. Six of them were either picked up off the street or picked off a foes' practice squad. The six, on this night, played 72, 64, 48, 32, 31 and six snaps against the Steelers.

In modern football, some teams survive this spate of injuries. The Ravens have. This year, the Giants, with 20 men down, didn't. The 49ers, with their linebackers wiped out, didn't. But there's something about the Ravens. During the season, dating back to training camp, I know they were chasing cornerbacks. They knew they were thin there, and getting thinner with each injury, but they wouldn't pay a ransom. The Broncos were dangling their fifth corner, Tony Carter, for a mid-round pick, and the Ravens thought it was robbery and left it alone. During the summer and early fall, they studied 40 cornerbacks, men either on practice squads or low on teams' depth charts, and pursued them. Nothing. No nibbles, even. Cornerbacks are at such a premium now that no team would accept a realistic price for a fifth cornerback. So week by week, Harbaugh and Newsome and some in the personnel staff would meet to talk personnel, particularly cornerbacks.

"We met every Thursday," Harbaugh said. "We went over every player in the league who was either on a practice squad or the bottom of somebody's roster, or guys on the street, that we would have some interest in. We studied all of them. So when we lost guys, we didn't have to start a search for guys. We already had our list. We had to sort 'em one last time with the coaches. That's how we found Melvin. Rashaan Melvin. Last time we played these guys, he was on Miami's practice squad."

Melvin is the prefect example of the Ravens working in concert. He started at cornerback against Ben Roethlisberger, covering deep threats Antonio Brown and Martavis Bryant. Here is his story: undrafted out of Northern Illinois, signed by Tampa Bay, IR'd by Tampa in 2013, waived by the Bucs last September, signed by Miami to the practice squad in Week 9, practiced with Miami for eight days, and coming off the practice field in South Florida one November afternoon, a coach said to him, "You've been poached by the Baltimore Ravens."

Poached. That was a word Melvin didn't know.

"I was trying to figure out if that was good or bad," he said Saturday night. "I asked my coach, 'Is that good or bad?'"

It was good. Baltimore poached Melvin, added him to its active roster, and when Asa Jackson went on IR in December, Melvin became a crucial part of the defense. He started Saturday night and played 64 snaps, and the Ravens somehow held Roethlisberger, at home, to three field-goal drives and one touchdown, and picked him off twice.

"I owe this team a lot," Melvin said. "I guess they saw a couple of films on me and decided to take a shot. But after [Jackson] got hurt, Coach Harbaugh came up to me one day and said, 'Rashaan, you're up. Be ready.' That was big. So I got ready. I just didn't want to disappoint him or the team."

Said Harbaugh: "It starts with Steve Bisciotti, Ozzie Newsome and [president] Dick Cass. Nobody cares who gets the credit. Nobody's trying to out-do somebody else so he'll look good. Nobody's doing anything to get a job. We don't make decisions … I mean, we'll disagree, and we'll argue things out. But it's always from a position of respect."

Harbaugh won't say if he thinks this has been the toughest season for the Ravens to be a competitive team. "We had 20 guys on IR in '08," he said. "We had a lot of things happen in our Super Bowl year—a lot of things. I'm not going to compare. But what we are is persistent. Relentlessly persistent in what we do. Over time, that pays off."

When the team gathers Tuesday to hear Harbaugh's message for Patriots week, it'll be the same stuff it heard last week. Harbaugh said he told the team last week: "We just gotta win a game. Just gotta play better than them one game. It's gonna be about football. Not about a rivalry. Not about a playoff games. Not about where we play. It's just football. Play football better than they do for one night. One game." The reason that's applicable this week is because of their rivalry with New England. They have played three times in the playoffs, and Baltimore has won two and lost one by a field goal—with kicker Billy Cundiff missing a 32-yarder in the final seconds.

Harbaugh will figure a way to impact his team. He has guests—players, sometimes, and people from the community at other times—talk to his team almost every day. When veteran Ravens guard Marshal Yanda talked to the team after a spate of hot weather one year in camp, Yanda told his mates to "embrace the grind." When Harbaugh got back to his office, he asked one of the equipment guys if they could have shirts made up with "Embrace The Grind" on the front. And they did. Earlier this year Harbaugh asked a special-teams player, Anthony Levine, to speak to the team, and Levine told them he'd been on a Super Bowl team in Green Bay in 2010, and though he was injured that year, he felt he could compare that team with this one. "Let me tell you one thing," Levine said. "We have a lot more fun here."

Said Flacco: "A lot of times the coach might not have a big impact. I've been on teams where the players basically are the ones with the biggest impact. But the thing with John is, he's there every day in the team meeting, so confident, and I think we feed off him. He does a great job not only setting up the schedule every day for us to be our very best, but also portraying the confidence. I think now, even more so. I've been here every day he has. He's even more confident this year. For whatever reason it definitely rubs off. I see it every week."

John Harbaugh is not his brother. Jim was in Pittsburgh on Saturday night, thrilled to watch a game he wasn't coaching. "An honor he was here," said John. It's probably wrong to say one is a short-termer and one a long-termer, because if Jim Harbaugh had seen eye-to-eye with the 49er architects, maybe he'd have stayed for a decade or more. But you don't have to ask or wonder whether John Harbaugh will stay in Baltimore. If he wins enough, and if Bisciotti keeps owning the team, and if the personnel side keeps the same character, John Harbaugh will grow old in Baltimore.

"That's an incredible thing to think about,'' he said. "But it's like I tell the guys: It's year to year, it's game to game, it's hour to hour, it's minute to minute, it's play to play, it's second to second. That's the way the National Football League works. So while the reality is that you might think about something like that, the longevity, the only way you survive is by thinking one second, one play, one minute at a time. Our guys, they're not looking left, they're not looking right. They had a lot of things that could have distracted them in the course of this season, but they didn't let that happen. They ask their questions, process it, then move on. They keep the important things important. That's what I'm proud of."

Ravens Pack Up, Proud Of 2014 Season

The Ravens fell short of their ultimate goal, but felt good about how far they came under such adversity.

Considering the adversity that could have dragged the Ravens down this year, making it to the divisional round of the playoffs is an accomplishment.

From the running back Ray Rice ordeal to 19 players on injured reserve, a suspension to defensive tackle Haloti Ngata and more, Baltimore went through the wringer.

But what makes Saturday's divisional loss so painful is that the Ravens looked to be thriving down the stretch – despite all the hardships.

The Ravens offense was humming. Baltimore had two 14-point leads in Foxborough against the top-seeded Patriots. They looked poised for another dramatic win in the final minutes as quarterback Joe Flacco marched his unit down the field.

And then, in an instant, it was all over.

"That's the tough part about it," defensive end Chris Canty said. "You're playing, you're playing and it never occurs to you that the outcome might not be what you want it to be. … We came up short, and that's the end of the narrative for the 2014 Ravens."

Sunday's locker room cleanout was a combination of both of those emotions.

There was disappointment, yet pride. There was a sense of accomplishment, yet a feeling that the Ravens fell short of their potential, which came alive in the playoffs.

Head Coach John Harbaugh delivered the final message to his team before breaking for the offseason, and it was one from the heart.

"[He] just [said] he's proud of us – all that we accomplished," said running back Justin Forsett. "We think that the sky is the limit for this group, and hopefully we make it work going forward."

And here comes the second part.

"Like I said, it's really unfortunate, because I know for us on the offensive side of the ball we were really in a groove and doing some great things," Forsett said. "Hopefully that momentum we built can move on to next season."

The ultimate question is whether the 2014 season was a success.

After finishing 8-8 and missing the playoffs for the first time since the Harbaugh-Flacco era began last year, the Ravens rebounded with a 10-6 record despite more injuries and a lot more controversy surrounding the team.

They finished third in the AFC North, yet knocked out the division-winning rival Pittsburgh Steelers in Heinz Field in the wild-card round. They took the AFC's top-seeded team to the brink, forcing them to pull out every trick.

Multiple players said they would look back on this season as a success despite an earlier playoff exit than planned.

"Unfortunately, we came up a little bit short of our goal, but I couldn't be more proud of a group of men, the character of the guys in this locker room, the way they fought, the way they overcame adversity obstacle after obstacle," Canty said.

"This team is moving forward. We're going to continue to build on the things that we improved on this year, strengthening the areas that we were weak [in] during the season and compete for championships in the future."

Once a weakness, deep and talented offensive line now Ravens' strength

By Jon Meoli

At every mention of their struggles a year earlier, the Ravens offensive linemen and coach Juan Castillo were steadfast in redirecting their thoughts to the 2014 edition of the group — a collectively healthier, more talented bunch that found itself in the perfect scheme.

After a season in which Joe Flacco was sacked barely more than once per game, a journeyman running back ran for more than 1,200 yards, and the line blocked for the league's sixth-best rushing attack, the unit that took the worst of the criticism for 2013's 8-8 campaign emerged as a strength this past season, and potentially will be for years to come.

"It's pretty evident. I think if we maintain the same guys in the room, the sky is the limit," left tackle Eugene Monroe said. "You can watch the film — we've been the most physical line in the league, hands down, and that's only going to get better."

By every measure, the 2014 offensive line improved over the group in 2013. The team's yards per carry increased from 3.1 to 4.5. Flacco took 60 percent fewer sacks than a year ago. And with every meaningful lineman under contract for 2015, the potential for an even better unit is real for coach John Harbaugh.

"The future is really great for our offensive line," he said. "When we first came in here in 2008, we said, 'You start in the trenches.' A team is built from the trenches out, and we were pretty strong in the trenches this year. That's the foundation of our team. … We have some really good, young players on both sides of the ball up front going forward, and we need to build on that."

Despite the departure of offensive coordinator Gary Kubiak, who took the Denver Broncos' head coaching job and was replaced by former Chicago Bears coach Marc Trestman, Harbaugh anticipates the same successful scheme to carry over.

"That's one of the major reasons that Marc [Trestman] is the right man for the job, because he has got a heck of a background in this particular system, and he wants to build on that," Harbaugh said. "We've got a lot of coaches in place, and we're going to build on the past." Harbaugh called Kubiak and his former staffers from Houston "the foremost guys around the stretch-zone" running scheme.

"We've learned from that, and that's a part of us now going forward, and we'll keep it," Harbaugh said.

Trestman said he anticipates continuing "complementary football" in Baltimore, with a run-pass balance that the team has come to be known for.

The success in 2014 was built on the strength of the Ravens' longest-tenured starting linemen, guards Marshal Yanda and Kelechi Osemele. The former, a year after he was admittedly limited coming off a winter shoulder surgery, played nearly every snap for the Ravens while earning his fourth straight Pro Bowl selection and making multiple All-Pro teams. He even showcased his versatility by moving out to right tackle in place of the injured Rick Wagner for the season's final three games.

Osemele, despite missing a pair of games with a knee injury in October, proved capable of playing at an All-Pro level. Establishing his brutal standard of dominace was a priority for Osemele as he returned from a back injury that limited him to just six games in 2013.

"That was something that was my primary concern — to come back healthy, and I was able to do that," Osemele said. "I was able to come back healthy. I really wanted to kind of make a statement that, 'I'm here. I'm back again. I'm ready to play.' I think I did that."

On either side of the guards, three players in their first full seasons as starters for the Ravens provided substantial upgrades. Monroe started 11 games at left tackle, a year after being acquired in a midseason trade from the Jacksonville Jaguars.

Center Jeremy Zuttah, acquired last spring from the Tampa Bay Buccaneers, played all but eight offensive snaps for the Ravens and took over as the signal-caller on the offensive line. His athleticism meshed well with offensive coordinator Gary Kubiak's zone running scheme, and he took over as a leader in the offensive line room from the moment he arrived.
And at right tackle — a position that seemingly went unaddressed after Michael Oher's departure — the Ravens had a top-flight solution in-house in Wagner, a 2013 fifth-round draft pick. The Wisconsin product played sparingly in his rookie season, but stepped in as the starter at right tackle last season and didn't let go until he was injured in Week 16.

Wagner was penalized just twice all season, and graded out as the team's best pass blocker, according to ProFootballFocus.com. He suffered a Lisfranc sprain in his foot against the Houston Texans, but that injury only served to showcase the line's promising future in another way.

With Wagner and Monroe both going down in Houston, Castillo brought rookies James Hurst and John Urschel back into the starting lineup for the first time since Week 8. The former was chosen to fill in for Monroe when he suffered a Week 4 knee injury instead of reserve Jah Reid, while Urschel started two games for an injured Osemele over Gino Gradkowski, the starting center in 2013.

Hurst started five regular season games, and became the first undrafted rookie left tackle to start a playoff game, the AFC wild-card game against the Pittsburgh Steelers. Urschel started three games in the regular season, plus two in the postseason.

"Honestly, I really feel like Urschel, in a few years, is going to be a Pro Bowler himself if he gets the opportunity, if he gets in there and plays," Osemele said. "I think [Urschel and Hurst] are just both really hard-working guys."

Hurst believes that came from Castillo.

"He's a hard worker in everything he does," Hurst said. "And his job, coaching and everything he has to do, he's going to outwork everyone. So, he takes that mentality to us."

In his season-ending press conference, Harbaugh said Monroe would enter training camp as the starting left tackle, meaning Hurst returns to a swing tackle role and Urschel likely backs up the guards and center. But for a unit that succeeded in part because of able deputies behind its starters, that depth will be "crucial," Osemele said.

"Having everybody come back, and knowing that it's going to be competitive, guys are going to have to stay in shape to be able to stay on this team," he said. "I definitely think that's going to be a strength for next year, knowing that we're going to have that much depth and that much competitiveness."

Dean Pees has done remarkable job with Ravens defense

OWINGS MILLS, Md. -- Baltimore Ravens defensive coordinator Dean Pees insists he doesn't have much familiarity with the New England Patriots anymore because it's been five years since he was an assistant in New England. With the amount of injuries and changes on the Ravens' defense this season, there are times you have to wonder how much familiarity Pees has with his own players.

In what has been a masterful job, Pees has guided the Ravens back to being a top-10 defense for the first time since 2011, and he's done so with creativity, practice-squad players and lots of Band-Aids. The Ravens are headed to Saturday's AFC divisional playoff game in New England because of Pees' ability to keep offenses out of the end zone despite sending out a new cast of defenders almost every week.

Consider the challenges that Pees has faced this season:

- The Ravens have had 11 different starting lineups in 16 regular-season games. The longest stretch a starting lineup remained intact was three weeks.
- Jimmy Smith, the team's top cornerback, was lost for the last nine games because of a season-ending foot injury, and Haloti Ngata, a five-time Pro Bowl defensive tackle, was suspended for the final month of the regular season after violating the NFL's policy on performance-enhancing drugs.
- The Ravens went through seven starting cornerbacks because of injuries and poor play, and they rotated four starting safeties throughout the season. Rashaan Melvin, who had been on two practice squads this season and wasn't on an NFL roster for five weeks this season, started at cornerback in the first round of the playoffs.
- The top two picks of the 2013 draft (safety Matt Elam and linebacker Arthur Brown) had reduced roles this season because of their struggles, and three of the top four defensive players drafted this season (defensive tackle Timmy Jernigan, safety Terrence Brooks and defensive end Brent Urban) missed a total of 26 games because of injuries.

This makes the Ravens' success on defense all that much more remarkable. Only five teams allowed fewer points, no running back ran for 100 yards and only one defense got to the quarterback more often. The Ravens' defense finished No. 8 overall, its best finish since ranking No. 3 in 2011.

"We've been through so many different players, and Dean has done a really tremendous job of tailoring the scheme toward what guys can do well," coach John Harbaugh said. "We don't really look like the same defense every week in a lot of different ways. It's not like we revamp everything we do, but he's always going to give an opponent something different that they're maybe not expecting to help guys play certain situations."

When it comes to defensive coordinators, Ravens fans often talk about Marvin Lewis and Rex Ryan in reverence. But this has been one of the more impressive coaching jobs on the defensive side of the ball. The defense has had its share of hiccups, from A.J. Green's 77-yard winning touchdown in Week 1 to the six touchdown passes allowed to Ben Roethlisberger in Week 9 to Philip Rivers' 80-yard fourth-quarter winning drive in Week 13. But the Ravens' defense has been the strength of the team down the stretch, giving up two touchdowns in the last 19 quarters. On Saturday, Pees goes against a Patriots team that he's schemed against five times since leaving New England. He was with the Patriots from 2004 to 2009, serving the last four years as defensive coordinator.

"At this point in time, I don't think I know them as well as everybody thinks I know them," Pees said. "I've been gone for five years. There are two guys on the defense that were there when I was there -- [Vince] Wilfork and [Rob] Ninkovich. The rest of the defense is different [and] every year the offense is different. ... People talk about my familiarity. It's just the fact I know Coach [Bill] Belichick and his coaching staff. Half of those guys are gone. It's been so far removed, it's different."

Ravens are NFL's ultimate road warriors

By Jamison Hensley

January 8, 2015

OWINGS MILLS, Md. -- The Baltimore Ravens have become the most unwanted guests in the league.

The Ravens have no fear going into an opposing stadium, knocking off a higher seed, and squashing the Super Bowl dreams of everyone in that building. In fact, they seem to thrive on it.

The Ravens' AFC divisional playoff game at the New England Patriots on Saturday not only represents a chance for the Ravens to make history but also provides another opportunity for them to hear their favorite sound. The players say there is no more satisfying feeling than to make a thunderous roar of a sellout crowd turn quickly silent.

"When it happens, it's pretty awesome," quarterback Joe Flacco said. "And I think that's the best way to say it. It's great when you can score a touchdown and then put another one on top of that and get that lead and just hear the place go quiet."

The Ravens have become the NFL's ultimate road warriors. No team in league history has traveled better in the playoffs than the Ravens. Their 10 postseason road wins are tied with the Green Bay Packers for most in NFL history. The difference is the Packers have existed for 93 years and the Ravens have played only 19 seasons.

The Ravens' victories have come by a thrilling last-minute field goal, a wild between-the-legs interception, and even a miracle (at least the Mile High variety). They've beaten Tom Brady (twice), Peyton Manning and Ben Roethlisberger on their own turf -- three quarterbacks with six Super Bowl titles between them.

Baltimore tries to give its players a home-like feel by maintaining the same meeting schedule on the road and putting its "Play Like A Raven" sign over the door of the visiting locker room. What has been more important to bring along is an even-keeled starting quarterback and a historically strong defense, a combination that has been a great equalizer away from home.

"We could be going to play on Mars and I'd still be very confident," wide receiver Torrey Smith said. "That's just how it is."

Ask Ravens players and coaches about their road success, and the typical response is shrugged shoulders. Coach John Harbaugh said there's no explanation other than "we played well."

The Ravens, though, rarely get rattled on the road, and that can be traced to their quarterback. Flacco is as laid-back on the field as he is in everything he does in life, a temperament that serves him well when 70,000 people are screaming at him.

There is a reason Flacco is called Joe Cool, and there is a reason he has two more road playoff wins than any other quarterback in NFL history.

"I have a totally different personality than everybody else, just like [Tom Brady] has a totally different personality than the other 31 [starting QBs]," Flacco said. “What may work for me is not going to work for somebody else. It's just who I am. It's impossible for me to be anybody else. I don't know how else to put it. I'm out there to play football, and that's pretty much it.”

The other steady influence for the Ravens has been stingy defense. From Ray Lewis to Ed Reed to Terrell Suggs, the Ravens have had strong-willed leaders and playmakers, and have held opponents to an average of 16.3 points in road playoff games.

This defense often harasses home teams into mistakes. The Ravens have forced nearly three turnovers per road game in their playoff history, and they deliver in big moments. There was Ray Lewis returning a Steve McNair interception for a TD in 2000, Bernard Pollard dislodging the ball from Patriots running back Stevan Ridley on a vicious hit, and Terrell Suggs making a between-the-knees interception on a Ben Roethlisberger pass.

"They're tough. They're physically and mentally tough," Patriots coach Bill Belichick said. "They can play in tough situations and they're talented. They keep coming at you."

The Patriots know the Ravens' ability to win on the road better than anyone. Since 2001, the Ravens are 2-1 when playing in New England in the playoffs, while the rest of the NFL is 1-11 there.

What's the Ravens' secret? They expect to win, and they expect to make plays. What the Ravens have done in the past gives them the confidence to silence another crowd on Saturday.
"I think it's kind of funny that people would be intimidated at any point in any game against anybody. It's just not in our nature," Flacco said.

"We've played in a lot of big football games and this is no [different]. It's not like it's not in our mind to go up there and win this football game. So we're very confident, and we believe we have a good team. We believe we have a team that can win this game, and I think that allows you to go up there and play free and play with that mindset and not really let those other thoughts creep into your head.”

Impressive win in Pittsburgh has Ravens peaking at a familiar time

By Don Banks

January 4, 2015

PITTSBURGH -- This is why the rest of the AFC didn't want to see the Baltimore Ravens squeak into the playoffs. This is why the Kansas City Chiefs did the rest of the conference's Super Bowl contenders no favors last week, when they toppled San Diego at Arrowhead Stadium to give the Ravens new life in the postseason. This is why even the top-seeded New England Patriots have to have a bit of an uneasy feeling in the pit of their stomach about now.

Granted, these Ravens never make it easy on themselves in the regular season. But they definitely know how to play in January. And John Harbaugh's battle-tested club knows what it takes to win on the road in the playoffs, silencing even the most hostile crowds with the kind of effort that hushed Heinz Field on Saturday night.

Don't look now, AFC, but Baltimore is at it again. The sixth-seeded Ravens (11-6) just announced their presence will once again be felt in the postseason, roughing up the AFC North champion Steelers, 30-17, in a game they controlled almost throughout. Baltimore is making its sixth playoff trip in Harbaugh's seven-year coaching tenure, and each time the Ravens have won at least one game in the postseason. More impressively, Baltimore is now an eye-popping 7-4 on the road in the playoffs, with Harbaugh tying both Tom Landry and Tom Coughlin for the most road victories in NFL postseason history.

Let that one sink in for a bit: Tom, Tom and Harbs. A coaching legend and Hall of Famer, a future Hall of Famer, and the guy who isn't even the most acclaimed coach in his own family. But, man, do his Ravens know how to turn it on when the NFL's single-elimination tournament starts every winter. And this time, they just eliminated their archrivals in the process, sweeping the third-seeded Steelers (11-6) out of the playoffs and extending Pittsburgh's postseason losing streak to three. The Steelers haven't won a playoff game since beating the visiting Jets in the AFC title game after the 2010 season.

There was nothing fluky about Baltimore's win, even acknowledging that Pittsburgh's loss of injured running back Le'Veon Bell (knee) in Week 17 was a huge hardship for Mike Tomlin's team to overcome and left the Steelers offense without any semblance of a running game (68 yards on 19 carries) to balance out their attack. But the Ravens imposed their will on Pittsburgh on both lines of scrimmage while gaining confidence and a sense of playoff-season swagger as the game unfolded. The Steelers only lead of the game was a 3-0 first-quarter advantage, with the Ravens scoring a touchdown early in the second quarter and assuming control from there on out.
"I think everybody was dialed in,'' said Ravens veteran receiver Steve Smith, who caught a team-high five passes for 101 yards and partook of his first Baltimore-Pittsburgh playoff game. "Guys really understand and know (what it takes). I think they were expecting to roll over us again.''

Baltimore went just 6-10 on the road in the past two years, and got lambasted here by the Steelers in Week 9, with Pittsburgh quarterback Ben Roethlisberger riddling its secondary with six touchdown passes in a 43-23 win. But that was the regular season, and this is the playoffs. And the Ravens know the difference.

Baltimore specializes in surviving in the regular season, then thriving in the postseason. Once you get into the playoffs, anything can happen, and usually does. The Ravens hang around all year, then scratch and claw to advance once the stakes are their highest. And this season in Baltimore, surviving meant enduring the unprecedented early season Ray Rice controversy, a slew of injuries that landed 18 players on IR, and still finding a way to win their way into the playoffs.
"We played our best football game of the year right here, and I think it's because of what we've been through all year (and) the way we've stuck together all year,'' Harbaugh said. "We had each other's backs and maintained our faith. That's what has made the difference for us.''

The Steelers offense finished with the No. 2 ranked offense in the league by yardage, and Baltimore's 49 sacks on defense were the second-most in the NFL. But without Bell, the Steelers looked one-dimensional, and the Ravens took advantage of that, sacking Roethlisberger five times, hitting him plenty more, and picking him off twice.
Without Bell, whose 2,200-plus yards from scrimmage made him the Steelers' most valuable weapon, Ravens outside linebacker Terrell Suggs admitted the task of beating Pittsburgh was made much easier.

"We knew we had to convince them to get out of their run game, without (No.) 26,'' Suggs said. "He's fantastic player and him not playing definitely worked to our advantage. I'm just going to be honest, had they had him, that's a whole 'nother weapon between him and 84 (receiver Antonio Brown)."

Suggs had one of the two interceptions of Roethlisberger, and it was a catch for the ages, with him somehow securing the ball between his legs, before wrapping up the mid-fourth-quarter pick with his arms. On the next play, Baltimore quarterback Joe Flacco found Ravens tight end Crockett Gilmore for a game-sealing 21-yard touchdown pass.
"I saw the running back (Ben Tate), I saw (Roethlisberger) ready to dump it and I just wanted to make a play on the running back and the ball popped up,'' Suggs said. "It was one of those plays that could change the game and I just knew I had to catch it. Grab the ball, get down and catch it. Had I dropped it, ain't no telling what Ben would've done. It was just being in the right place at the right time."

Harbaugh called Suggs' grab "the greatest catch in football," then set up the 12th-year veteran for the kill. "You'll never see a greater catch," he said. "We just gave him the game ball for the greatest catch in the history of football. I toss it to him. What happened do you think? He dropped it. He caught the one that mattered. Clutch."

Speaking of clutch, unlike Roethlisberger, Flacco was truly clutch once again in the postseason, completing 18 of 29 passes for 259 yards, with two touchdowns, no interceptions and 114.0 passer rating. The Ravens didn't have any running game to speak of either, with just 49 yards on 25 carries (2.0), but that didn't stop Flacco from recording his mind-boggling 10th career playoff win in 14 games, giving him twice as many postseason wins as any other quarterback in the league since he entered the NFL as a first-round pick in 2008. Flacco has 20 touchdowns and just two interceptions in his past nine playoff games, and Baltimore is 5-0 in the postseason since losing the 2011 AFC title game in excruciating fashion to New England in Foxboro.

Which is exactly where the Ravens are headed next weekend, to take on the No. 1-seeded Patriots in the first game of the divisional playoff round, on Saturday at 4:30 p.m. Baltimore has pulled playoff road upsets of New England in 2009's first round, and 2012's AFC Championship Game, and has always matched up well against Bill Belichick's team. As we have seen over the years, the defenses that can pressure Tom Brady are the defenses that render him mortal, and few are as adept at moving No. 12 off his spot than the Ravens.

True, Rice and receiver Anquan Boldin were two of the biggest play-makers for Baltimore in its past playoff wins at Gillette Stadium, and both are no longer with the Ravens. But there's still an unmatched tenaciousness that Baltimore plays with against the long-time AFC powerhouse, and the Ravens are not intimidated by the challenge of going into Foxboro.
Suggs didn't specify, but he said he knows the league isn't hoping for another Ravens run to the Super Bowl. Not with the enticing New England-Seattle showdown as the people's choice for Super Bowl Sunday, or even the potential of another Brady versus Peyton Manning matchup in the AFC Championship Game.

"This is just the NFL," Suggs said. "We all know the matchup (the) NFL wants to see, something for the TV, for the sponsors, But we've got faith in ourselves, in Ravens Nation, and let's see if we can disrupt some people's plans."

It's a skill that Harbaugh's resilient and resourceful club has gotten very adept at in the past seven years. Already you can sense how much the rest of the AFC playoff field is starting to regret not killing off these Ravens when it had the chance. In Baltimore, another Lombardi chase is on, and the underdog Ravens are looking like a threat once more.

Baltimore Ravens remain class of AFC North

The Baltimore Ravens find themselves in a familiar role -- they're the last AFC North team standing. Even though they finished third in the division, the Ravens are the only team left in this year's playoffs after they beat the Pittsburgh Steelers this past Saturday night and the Cincinnati Bengals lost at the Indianapolis Colts on Sunday.

The Ravens remain the class of the AFC North again because of their consistent success in the postseason and the disappointing finishes of the Steelers and Bengals. Let's not even get started with the Cleveland Browns. When it comes to the playoffs, the Ravens are at a different level than the other division teams. The Ravens have advanced further in the playoffs than any other AFC North team for three of the past four years (2011, 2012 and 2014).

Let's take a look at how the AFC North teams have fared since the 2011 playoffs:

- The Ravens are 6-1 with playoff wins in three of the past four postseasons. Oh, and they won a Super Bowl title in 2012. The Ravens would've gone to another Super Bowl if not for Lee Evans' failed catch three years ago.

- The Steelers only have two playoff appearances, and they failed to advance past the wild-card round. They lost to Tim Tebow in overtime three years ago and the sixth-seeded Ravens this past Saturday. There's only 10 starters remaining from the Steelers' last playoff win, which came in January 2011.

- The Bengals haven't won a playoff game even though they've made the playoffs in each of the past four seasons. Their average margin of defeat has been 15 points. The Bengals' last playoff win came in January 1991, when they beat Houston. That's the Oilers, not Texans.

The Ravens are also becoming the class of the NFL. There are only two teams that have earned playoff berths in six of the past sevens seasons and won a Super Bowl during that time: the Ravens and the Green Bay Packers.

With aggressive play, Ravens continue to be dangerous in NFL playoffs

The Ravens expected the offense to stay on the field on fourth-and-1 with an 11-point lead early in the fourth quarter. They weren't surprised when offensive coordinator Gary Kubiak opted to pass on third-and-1 in Pittsburgh Steelers territory a couple minutes later.

And they certainly weren't taken aback when, on the play after Terrell Suggs' interception, Kubiak called for the knock-out punch rather than a run to kill some clock.

"Kubiak told us the night before the game that we were going to come after these guys and that we weren't going to be playing conservative," Ravens left guard Kelechi Osemele said. "We were coming here to win. We could see that from the first couple of series, the way that we were driving the ball down the field and taking shots and guys were making plays. I really liked it. I kind of wish that we did it the whole year."

The Ravens' 30-17 victory over the Steelers in the AFC wild-card round Saturday night at Heinz Field was defined by an aggressiveness and fearlessness that also characterized their Super Bowl run two years ago. Those traits are also what make the Ravens a dangerous postseason team as they get ready for another road playoff game against a high-powered and favored opponent.

After dispatching their biggest rival and winning a playoff game for the sixth time in seven seasons under coach John Harbaugh, the Ravens will face the top-seeded New England Patriots at 4:35 p.m. Saturday in the divisional round.

Players vowed to bring the same aggressive mindset to Gillette Stadium, where the Ravens have won playoff games in two of the past six seasons.

"You have to play these games to win. You can't play to not lose," said Ravens quarterback Joe Flacco, who completed 18 of 29 passes for 259 yards and threw two second-half touchdown passes Saturday. "You have to go out there and you have to let everything go. You can't worry about the outcome.

"We're fighting for one big prize. You have to do the things that are going to get you to that point and that's by playing aggressive football, not having a conscience."

The Ravens' offense struggled for much of December, getting off to poor starts, failing to consistently run the ball or convert on third down and not getting a whole lot going down the field. The offense played so poorly for three quarters in the regular-season finale against the Cleveland Browns that it was booed by the home crowd throughout the game.

But on Saturday, after a three-and-out on the first drive, the Ravens scored points on six of their next seven full drives. The Ravens turned the ball over just once on a fluke fumble by Justin Forsett, who lost the ball when he ran into teammate Owen Daniels. While the running game gained only 49 yards on 25 carries, it keyed the Ravens' first scoring drive.

Flacco also took several shots down the field, hitting Steve Smith for a 40-yard reception and making deep throws to Torrey Smith and Jacoby Jones that resulted in penalties on Pittsburgh.

"I thought Gary called a great game. He kept them off balance. We did a great job with pass protections, of neutralizing some of their pressures," Harbaugh said. "That was kind of the game plan. We wanted to come here and go after them. We didn't want to play scared, so to speak."

It was Flacco and the offensive line that mostly kept him clean that provided the confidence to the coaching staff to remain in attack mode. Flacco didn't turn the ball over for the sixth time in the past eight games.

He now has thrown 166 pass attempts in the playoffs since his last interception, the fourth-longest streak in NFL history, according to the Elias Sports Bureau. In his past five playoff games, Flacco has thrown 13 touchdown passes and no interceptions.
"The biggest thing is coming out and playing consistent football, being patient, taking what they give you. I think we as a group, I think I always do it," Flacco said. "These games against good teams, they come down to the wire. You're kind of forced to be aggressive in a lot of situations, and I think it just lends itself well to us."

Flacco said while preparing for the game, the Ravens practiced various fourth-down plays with the intention of "going for it anywhere on the field." The need arose just once, and they picked up a first down on a quarterback sneak by Flacco on fourth-and-1 from the Steelers' 49 with 12:32 to play. At the time, the Ravens led, 20-9, but instead of trying to pin Pittsburgh back, Harbaugh kept his offense on the field.

There were plenty of other instances of aggressiveness.

On their next drive after the fourth-down conversion, the Ravens had a third-and-1 on the Steelers' 34. There was just less than nine minutes to play, and the Ravens led by five points.

Instead of running the football, Flacco took a shot at the end zone, where Torrey Smith had gotten behind the Steelers' defense. Smith caught the ball but couldn't get his second foot inbounds, and the Ravens settled for Justin Tucker's 52-yard field goal.

"The call to throw it in the end zone was Gary's call," Harbaugh said. "It was a great call. We were a hair's breath away from putting the game away right there. "

The Ravens did ultimately put the game away the next time they touched the ball. Suggs' interception, in which he cradled the ball between his legs, gave the Ravens possession at the Steelers' 21.

Leading, 23-15, the Ravens needed just a field goal to make it a two-possession game right around the midpoint of the fourth quarter. The Ravens, however, went for the touchdown, and got it when, on the very next play, Flacco rolled out and hit reserve tight end Crockett GIllmore for a 21-yard score.

"You're never going to win a game by osmosis, by hoping to win," said Ravens wide receiver Steve Smith, who had five catches for 101 yards. "You're going to win it by being aggressive. That showed itself today, and we also have to make those plays when we're aggressive. It makes no sense to be aggressive when you're shooting yourself in the foot with a penalty or a dropped pass."

The Patriots, though, represent a far different challenge to the Ravens' aggressive philosophy than the Steelers. New England has arguably the best cornerback tandem in the league in Darrelle Revis and Brandon Browner, who have shut down some of the game's best receivers this season.

If recent postseason history is any indication, that won't dissuade Flacco and the Ravens from turning their offense loose.

"I feel like the playoffs, it really isn't for the timid," Osemele said. "I feel like that's because the speed of the game, it's just so much different, and there's not time to really even play conservatively.

"I feel like you always do have to be on the offensive."

Ravens Enter Playoffs 'Forged' Through Adversity

John Harbaugh has kept his team moving forward, and gets much of the credit for overcoming adversity.

Minutes after the Ravens clinched their spot in the playoffs, Head Coach John Harbaugh circled the team around him and relayed the story of Gideon, which is referenced in the Bible's Book of Judges.

He had read the story a couple weeks earlier and was reminded of it that morning, and he told the players that they would revisit it this week.

The story goes that God wanted Gideon to free the Israelites from the neighboring Midianites. Gideon assembled an army, but God kept having to cut his numbers to prove that, with His strength and not the strength of man, they could still win the battle.

After beginning with 32,000 men, Gideon and his 300 soldiers drove the Midianites out.

The story reflects the season the Ravens have had.

In training camp, it appeared that Baltimore had plenty of ammunition to make a deep playoff run. But the Ravens' numbers have shrunk dramatically.

First it was Pro Bowl running back Ray Rice's suspension and ultimate termination. That set off a national firestorm.

Then injuries hit, and they hit hard, sending 18 players (as of now) to injured reserve, including integral pieces such as tight end Dennis Pitta (hip), cornerback Jimmy Smith (foot) and tackle Rick Wagner (foot).

There was another suspension too, this time to one of the franchise's bedrocks in five-time Pro Bowl defensive tackle Haloti Ngata. In the midst of a tight playoff race, Ngata had to sit out four games for violating the league's performance-enhancing substances policy.

One player at a time, the Ravens' roster was picked off and those in the middle of it were tested.

But here the Ravens are, in the playoffs once again for the sixth time in seven seasons. And now, as they head to Pittsburgh as the sixth seed, with some of the worst Super Bowl odds of any team in the tournament, the Ravens feel mighty after all the adversity they've faced.

"We feel like we've been forged in a lot of different fires – daily and weekly fires that have come up, and our team is stronger because of that," Head Coach John Harbaugh said. "We're very mentally tough, and that's a good thing going into the playoffs."

As defensive end Chris Canty said this week, and many other have echoed, every NFL team goes through adversity. That's just part of the business, and no other team is going to send its condolences.

But wide receiver Steve Smith Sr. has been around for 14 years, and it's even taken him by surprise.

"It's abnormal," he said. "It has been very unique and interesting, and at times, a circus."

The Rice incident kicked it all off.

While Rice wasn't around for many of the questions after he was released, the rest of the Ravens were left dealing with the aftermath of his actions. And the national reaction came from every direction – strongly.

Dealing with something never before seen in the NFL was a new challenge for this team and for Harbaugh. This was well beyond the scope of just coaching football.

"One great thing about being a head coach at this level is that you're dealing with adult problems," Harbaugh said this week.

"All kinds of different 'crises,' as you put it, that come up in people's lives that you do have an opportunity to get involved with on a personal level, and that can be challenging, but it can be rewarding."

While trying to take on those problems, Harbaugh had to focus on keeping his team moving forward. The Rice story dragged throughout training camp and heightened when a two-game suspension was first announced.

Harbaugh leaned on his mantra of "W.I.N." (What's important now?) which is tattooed throughout the building.

"[It's] taking the opportunity through what we do every single day – whether it's have a great practice or focus on your next opponent or your next challenge – not looking to the left or to the right, looking straight ahead at the next task at hand and not getting caught up in some 'civilian affairs' when it comes to taking care of our business on the field," Harbaugh said.

Rice, who was arguably one of the Ravens' best players from 2009-2013, was cut just two days before a critical Week 2 matchup against the rival Pittsburgh Steelers. The Under Armour Performance Center's parking lot was filled with television trucks. The Ravens were coming off a bitter loss in the final minutes to division foe Cincinnati.

The distractions were at an all-time high.

Yet the Ravens responded with a convincing 26-6 beatdown of their rivals. It was a turning point in the eyes of running back Justin Forsett, the man stepping in for Rice.

"The way we went out and performed against Pittsburgh that night, it said a lot about us, the resilience and how focused we were about our craft," Forsett said. "I was really, really impressed and proud of the way we handled that situation."

Getting through that gave the Ravens' skin like an armadillo, a phrase Harbaugh likes to use.
"Everything that came behind it wasn't as big as the first distraction," cornerback Lardarius Webb said. "We had been through bigger stuff."

That wasn't the end of the turmoil. A week later, Pitta fractured and dislocated his hip again, and just like that, one of Flacco's favorite targets and a player that fit perfectly into Offensive Coordinator Gary Kubiak's two-tight end scheme was gone.

The Ravens pushed ahead, winning five of their next six games while feasting on the weakened NFC South. They rolled into Cincinnati sitting at 5-2 and in first place in the AFC North.

Then came more punches to the gut. Baltimore's secondary, which was already thin, lost its best performing cornerback to that point, Jimmy Smith, to a season-ending foot injury. Cincinnati delivered, picking on his replacement with a late, long drive.

An offensive pass interference call wiped what would have been a game-winning touchdown by Smith off the board, angering the Ravens. Baltimore lost, 27-24.

The thin secondary was exposed the next week by the Steelers, as quarterback Ben Roethlisberger dropped six touchdowns on the secondary and handed the Ravens a 43-23 tail kicking. That loss suddenly dropped Baltimore into last place in the division.

Harbaugh and the players stuck together. While the head coach refuses to give himself the credit, his players say otherwise.

Earlier this month, quarterback Joe Flacco said persevering all starts with Harbaugh.

"It definitely starts with him and filters throughout the rest of us," Flacco said. "So, we are able to keep that levelheadedness and keep the same mentality no matter what's happened the previous week and move on and still go out there the next week and play well."

What helps is that Harbaugh himself hasn't changed too much over his seven years. He's been a constant, steady leader.

Flacco said Harbaugh is now able to trust the players more, especially the veterans. He has a little different style in certain minor instances. But Harbaugh's core beliefs are all "pretty much the same as when he first got here," said Flacco.

The Ravens rallied down the stretch of the regular season. They had even more injuries, then Ngata's suspension. The offense stumbled down the stretch. They responded after a harsh loss at home against San Diego and a complete clunker in Houston.

Through it all, they won five of their final seven games to get into the playoffs on the last day.

In the final minutes of the win over Cleveland, as a postseason berth was coming into view, Harbaugh went to Smith for an embrace.

"Let me tell you something," Smith said into his ear. "You're a heck of a coach. You're a heck of a coach. You're a heck of a coach. You do it right. You're a heck of a coach."

The next day, Harbaugh opened his Monday morning press conference talking about how proud he is of the other coaches and players, especially veteran leaders such as Flacco and outside linebacker Terrell Suggs.

"You're riding on that train with those guys through all those valleys and all those peaks and all those twists and turns and all those tunnels, and you're looking and you're saying to yourself, 'What is that light? Is it the end? Is it light at the end of the tunnel, or is it the train coming from the other end?' If it's the train, we'll smash into it anyway," Harbaugh said.

"I just feel like those guys came out the other end really well. I'm happy for them and proud of them and excited for the opportunity to walk with them through this next challenge."

Waging Four Battles and Relying on Joe Cool

The Ray Rice scandal rocked the NFL, but not the Ravens' locker room. Once the domain of a spitfire linebacker named Ray Lewis, it's now the province of a ho-hum quarterback who prefers talking over yelling. A look at how Joe Flacco has kept Baltimore on track—and how the team upgraded at running back

By Jenny Vrentas

BALTIMORE — In this city, rooting for the Orioles was much easier than getting behind the Ravens this fall. The O's hadn't been this good since the 1990s, but they won their division and advanced to the American League Championship Series for the first time in 17 years. Two seasons removed from hoisting the Lombardi Trophy, the Ravens became ground zero for a firestorm that's still casting a pall over the NFL.

As September wore on, football fans in Baltimore noticed that the crowd kept arriving later than usual and that tailgating lots weren't quite filling up—one of the final ripples in a series of chain-reaction events that began with Ray Rice knocking out his fiancée (now wife) in an Atlantic City casino elevator in February.

The team stood behind Rice for months, only to cut him on Sept. 8—a day after Baltimore's opener—when TMZ aired the elevator surveillance video. But give the remaining players their due: They've made the Ravens impossible to ignore. Two Sundays ago, on the afternoon when Orioles manager Buck Showalter was feted at M&T Bank Stadium with a rousing ovation before kickoff, the Ravens dominated the Falcons, 29-7, and finished the afternoon in first place of their division.

The Bengals, only by the margin of a offensive pass interference call against Steve Smith, Sr., recaptured the top spot in the AFC North a week later. But even with a 27-24 down-to-the-wire loss to a division rival on the road, the Ravens made another statement about their resiliency. This is a good team that has a shot of making the playoffs. And while that's been the norm in Baltimore, nothing about this season has been typical.

Teams have fallen apart under less duress. Consider the 2008 New York Giants, who were 10-1 when wideout Plaxico Burress accidentally shot himself in a Manhattan nightclub. They lost four of their final six, including a divisional-round playoff game to the Eagles. "That's what people want," Baltimore receiver Torrey Smith says. "That's why we've got to band together."

The organization, up to the owner, will be investigated for how the Rice situation was handled, but none of the mess has bled onto the field. "The honest truth of it is, we are somewhat affected by all the stuff that happens to everybody on our team off the field," Joe Flacco says. "But it didn't happen to me. It didn't happen to Marshal [Yanda]. It didn't happen to Torrey. It didn't happen to Steve. We feel for the people that it affected, [but] we aren't as directly related as I think most people think we are."

* * *

Amid the turmoil, players have clung to routine. The receivers go out for weekly dinners at Jimmy's Famous Seafood. On Friday afternoons an actual jukebox blasts tunes of all genres in the locker room. Veterans have been a resource for younger guys. "Worry about your job," Yanda, an All-Pro right guard, told the two rookies, John Urschel and James Hurst, who filled in for injured starters on the left side of the line. "Don't make it more difficult than it has to be."

More than just teammates, Torrey Smith is particularly close with Rice, as are their wives. In early October, after dropping a pass on a pivotal fourth down in a loss to the Colts, he tweeted, “Very trying times for me on and off the field.” The wideout has tried to steel his focus by staying off his cell phone—he often leaves it at home when going to the team facility—and by deleting the Twitter app from his phone (though he’s still occasionally tweeting). He described both as “outside distractions I needed to eliminate.”

Coach John Harbaugh is fond of using slogans and inspirational sayings to sharpen the mental focus of players. “Be here now” was one he used early in his tenure. “The Team, The Team, The Team” is painted on a wall outside the locker room. Recently, he’s been wearing a hat with a slogan borrowed from his dad: “4 Fights Every Day.”

The four fights:

1. Us vs. Them
2. Division From Within
3. Complacency
4. Fatigue

The four-fights slogan has been used in Baltimore for a while, but one battle in particular has taken on new meaning. “Division from within—it means making sure we stay together as a locker room,” Yanda says. “Through the losses. Through the adversity. Through the controversy. If that goes downhill, we are not going to win any games.”

Baltimore’s locker room was once defined by Ray Lewis, the spitfire linebacker everyone rallied around at the end of the 2012 season. The Ravens persevered through a different kind of black cloud then, losing four of their last five regular-season games before reeling off four straight postseason victories, including the Super Bowl. In Lewis’s absence, the Ravens’ team chemistry is now defined by their quarterback, Joe Cool.
Just look at how Flacco handled himself in Week 7 against the Falcons, sitting on the bench while watching Baltimore’s defense on the video board. Cornerback Jimmy Smith dropped an interception in the first half, and fullback Kyle Juszczyk leapt from the bench and shouted, “Ahhhh!” Flacco didn’t even bat an eyelash, prompting Juszczyk to turn to his quarterback and say, “Joe, you literally didn’t change that entire time!”

“Guys make fun of me. But it’s just me, it’s just who I am, I can’t help it or change it,” Flacco says. “But I think playing quarterback in the NFL, it does help. You’re the one guy, no matter what is going on—you have to stay with it and be the guy they can look at and say, ‘Ah, Joe looks alright. Let’s go.’ That definitely can come in handy in certain situations.”

Where the emotional Lewis once yelled, Flacco just talks. During training camp, former Panther Steve Smith Sr. had been pressing in practice while trying to learn a new offense. Flacco just pulled him aside and told him, “Relax, and don’t overthink it.” When Rice was cut, Flacco also initiated a handful of one-on-one talks with teammates, but he knew where and when to let others take over.
“We had little conversations about it here and there,” Flacco says. “Torrey was really close with Ray. I wasn’t ever in a position to say, ‘Hey, let’s react like this,’ but I felt like the guys who were closest to the situation handled it pretty well. And I think the fact that we were winning football games has helped it be less of an issue.”

Three days after cutting Rice, the Ravens hosted the division-rival Steelers on a Thursday night. Harbaugh tersely briefed his team on the personnel decision and moved on. “No long speech or anything like that. There was nothing more really to be said,” Yanda says. “We just had to focus on beating Pittsburgh. That’s what we were talking about all week.”

The Ravens’ 26-6 win over the Steelers, in which Flacco completed 72.4% of his passes, was the first of three straight. And while two losses over the past four weeks—by a touchdown to the Colts and a field goal to the Bengals—dropped the Ravens’ record to 5-3, they have a chance to rebound by sweeping the season series with Pittsburgh this Sunday night at Heinz Field.

* * *

This season has presented players in the Ravens’ locker room with an off-field situation for which there is no manual on how to read and react. But on the field, Baltimore has implemented a new offense designed to give the players clear-cut answers.

New offensive coordinator Gary Kubiak coaches Flacco with the goal of making his quarterback’s decision-making process black and white. When Flacco makes the right decision, the play works. When he doesn’t, everyone knows it. Flacco had an off day against the Bengals last week—a season-low 50% completion rate—but overall he’s been more decisive making his reads. Steve Smith, who had an 80-yard game-winning touchdown called back against Cincinnati because of offensive pass interference, has been a great match for Flacco’s big arm.

But the biggest boon has been Justin Forsett, a journeyman running back who has proved to be an upgrade over Rice. Through eight games, the 29-year-old is just 14 carries shy of matching his career high for an entire season (114 with Seattle in 2009). Now on his fifth team in seven seasons, Forsett is averaging 5.5 yards per carry (Rice averaged 3.1 in 2013).

Forsett fits well in the zone-stretch scheme he first learned two seasons ago when playing for Kubiak in Houston. Despite standing a mere 5-8, he uses good acceleration to hit the hole and break tackles. According to Pro Football Focus, 247 of his 571 yards have come after contact. Rookie Lorenzo Taliaferro, who has scored four touchdowns to Forsett’s three, has emerged as good complement.

"I guess I have surprised some people. Especially people who didn't think or know that I am still in the league," Forsett says. "But when we lost an All-Pro back like Ray, we knew we had to carry the load as a running back room."

Ninth-year tight end Owen Daniels, who has ably filled the void of an injured Dennis Pitta, says the Ravens are "the deepest football team I have been on." There are many factors that shape the "next man up" philosophy.

Recently retired cornerback Chris Carr played for five NFL teams in nine years—including three seasons in Baltimore—and he remembers John Harbaugh as the best game-day coach he ever had. Harbaugh will get in players' faces during practice, Carr says, but bring out the best in players on Sundays by letting them figure things out on the field. "The organizational culture, as much as it has come under attack, it is still a culture that the players and coaches can really thrive in," adds ESPN NFL analyst Trent Dilfer, a quarterback on the Ravens' Super Bowl-winning team in 2000. "It's very empowering as a player."

"If you go to other places like Cleveland or Minnesota or Oakland, places where the coaching units often change, you might get the feeling when something negative comes up, Oh, here we go again! We are going to have a bad season," Carr says. "With Baltimore, with that coaching staff, they've had seasons when they started off so-so but won the Super Bowl. They were up and down through the entire regular season, but they pulled it together at the end. So they can say, 'Hey, we've had adversity before, stuff that has happened to us, this year and that year, and we prevailed and we played well.' And that gives players confidence, too."

* * *

Some Ravens fans still have mixed feelings. Bill West, the president of a Ravens Roost fan club (his is No. 15, based in Arbutus, Md., out of 135) wasn't one of the 7,000 fans who exchanged their Ray Rice jerseys in September. He won't wear his anymore—for now at least—but it's still hanging in his Ravens memorabilia room over his garage.

"Ray Rice was on the verge of being one of those iconic names in this town—15, 30 years from now, people would have talked about him like they do about Lenny Moore," says Stan 'The Fan' Charles, who was a sports talk radio host in Baltimore for more than two decades. "But Baltimore sports fans, because of what happened with losing our football team [to Indianapolis in 1984], are very practical. They have just moved on."

Rice still has ties to Baltimore. The House of Ruth Maryland, a Baltimore-based shelter for battered women, saw a 10-day bump in donations after the elevator video was released. The organization is having ongoing conversations with Rice and his wife, Janay, about opportunities to raise domestic violence awareness, a spokeswoman said. And Rice's charitable fund, which has helped fund scholarships and hospital bills for underprivileged kids in Baltimore and his hometown of New Rochelle, N.Y., is still active.

Last week, a front-page Baltimore Sun article mentioned the fund and told the stories of two local families of special-needs boys who had met Rice at community events. The parents wrote character-reference letters on Rice's behalf to court officials in Atlantic City, and they were photographed by the newspaper wearing Rice's No. 27 Ravens jersey. On game days at M&T Bank Stadium, a smattering of fans still wear No. 27, and Rice's name still appears on plaques in the press box. He won the "Media MVP" award in 2009, 2011 and 2012.

Rice, whose initial two-game ban morphed into an indefinite league suspension, filed a grievance against the Ravens last week for terminating his contract. But he's still close with players in the locker room, having played in Baltimore for six seasons and having been an integral part of the 2012 Super Bowl team. Torrey Smith, one of Rice's closest friends, keeps in touch with him. But they don't focus on the team—or even football.

"We don't bring it up. It's taken away from him, so that's not something you talk about," Smith says. "The biggest thing is to make sure he takes care of himself to become a better man, which he is. It is still family. It's tough for people outside to understand that, but it goes far beyond the lines for us."

Yet Rice is largely out of that family now, forgotten in the manner of having suffered a season-ending injury, discarded and left behind while former teammates continue a week-to-week grind that doesn't reward sentimentality. "Around the league in general, what people don't realize is it's a team game, but the players' mindset is really like a selfish mindset," Carr says. "And I don't mean selfish in a bad sense, but privately focused on what they have to do."

For Flacco that means making the right reads, handing the ball off to a back named Forsett and remaining as nonplussed as ever.

"Listen, Ray is very close to everybody in this locker room," Flacco says. "He and I got drafted together. So I root for Ray. And whether he's going to root for us, I have no idea. He's not on the team anymore. So it's not something I have ever really thought about, to be honest with you. I haven't talked with him too much since then."

Ravens' C.J. Mosley, Elvis Dumervil, Marshal Yanda picked for Pro Bowl

By Jeff Zrebiec

December 23, 2014

When the Ravens drafted C.J. Mosley with the 17th overall pick in May, they envisioned him being an impact starter from Day One, and the inside linebacker hasn't disappointed.

Mosley learned Tuesday that he was selected for the 2015 Pro Bowl, becoming the first Ravens rookie to achieve that feat. Mosley, who leads the team and ranks seventh in the NFL with 122 tackles, was one of three Ravens to be picked, joining right guard Marshal Yanda and outside linebacker Elvis Dumervil.

Running back Justin Forsett, fullback Kyle Juszczyk, outside linebacker Terrell Suggs, kick returner Jacoby Jones and punter Sam Koch were all named as first alternates.

The Pro Bowl will be played Jan. 25 at University of Phoenix Stadium in Glendale, Ariz., the site of Super Bowl XLIV, which will be contested the following week.

In a statement released by the team, Mosley said that he was “honored and humbled” and thanked many members of the organization, including fellow inside linebacker Daryl Smith.

“With Daryl specifically, it’s meant so much having a person and player of his caliber next to me throughout my first NFL season,” Mosley said.

Mosley, Dallas Cowboys guard Zack Martin and St. Louis Rams defensive tackle Aaron Donald are the lone rookies on the Pro Bowl roster, which is selected via voting by fans, coaches and players.

For the second straight year, the players weren’t selected by conference, rather they were chosen out of a league-wide pool by position. The Pro Bowlers will be drafted onto two teams by Hall of Famers Cris Carter and Michael Irvin on Jan. 21.

If the Ravens send only three players to the game, it would mark their fewest Pro Bowl selections since 2005, when offensive tackle Jonathan Ogden was their lone representative.

The Ravens have had at least four Pro-Bowl honorees for eight straight seasons, and they figure to have at least that number by the time practices for the game begins next month. Players who are on teams that are preparing for the Super Bowl will withdraw from the game and there also will be additional vacancies because of players who drop out because of injuries or personal reasons.

If the Ravens aren’t preparing for the Super Bowl — assuming no ties, they need a victory over the Cleveland Browns on Sunday and a loss by the San Diego Chargers against the Kansas City Chiefs to even make the playoffs — some of their alternates will likely be elevated into the Pro Bowl.
That would be particularly significant for a veteran like Koch, who has punted for nine NFL seasons but has never garnered a Pro Bowl invite. Koch is averaging 47.4 yards per punt, which is a career high. The Cincinnati Bengals’ Kevin Huber and the Indianapolis Colts’ Pat McAfee were the punters selected.

Pro Bowl recognition would also further validate Forsett’s comeback season. Contemplating retirement this offseason after he was released by the Jacksonville Jaguars, Forsett instead signed a 1-year deal with the Ravens and has become one of their top offensive weapons. His 1,147 rushing yards are a career-high and rank sixth in the NFL.

Le’Veon Bell (Pittsburgh Steelers), DeMarco Murray (Cowboys), Jamaal Charles (Chiefs), Arian Foster (Houston Texans), Marshawn Lynch (Seattle Seahawks) and LeSean McCoy (Philadelphia Eagles) were the six running backs selected.

The three Ravens who made it were hardly major surprises. There were some questions about whether Mosley get the invite, given his rookie status. However, the linebacker had a high-profile college career at Alabama and he’s emerged as one of the leading candidates for NFL Defensive Rookie of the Year.

To go along with his team-high in tackles, Mosley also has three sacks, two interceptions, eight passes defended, one forced fumble and one fumble recovery.

“The main thing is I made it through a full NFL season, so kudos to that,” Mosley said. “I held on strong. It’s a great compliment for the organization and for me as a player.”

Dumervil, meanwhile, is having one of the best seasons of his career. His 17 sacks tie a career high, set with the Denver Broncos in 2009, and also represent a single-season Ravens record. He’s currently third in the NFL in sacks, behind the Chiefs’ Justin Houston (18) and the Texans’ J.J. Watt (17 ½).

This is Dumervil’s fourth Pro Bowl selection as he also made the team in 2009, 2011 and 2012 while playing for the Broncos.

“This is a humbling experience,” Dumervil said in a statement. “First of all, I want to thank God, because without Him, this would not be possible. So many people played a part in this, and I just want to thank them all — my teammates, our great coaching staff and our tremendous fans. To be able to represent the Ravens organization and the long tradition of great defensive players here is very humbling.

“I also credit Terrell Suggs for helping me this season. A lot of what I’ve been able to do is a result of the attention he garners on the opposite side. He’s an incredible player who is having another outstanding year, and it’s an honor to play with him.”

Yanda was a Pro Bowl honoree for a fourth straight season.

The veteran guard, a mainstay on the Ravens’ offensive line since 2007, has started the first 15 games and his play has been one of the keys to the Ravens’ resurgent running game.

With Gary Kubiak calling the plays, Joe Flacco is nearing career highs

By Jeff Zrebiec
The Baltimore Sun
December 20, 2014

Every Friday, offensive coordinator Gary Kubiak hands Joe Flacco his play sheet for the Ravens' upcoming game and asks the quarterback to review it and rank the plays that he likes.

Flacco usually does far more than that.

"Joe likes to talk, so he'll let me know what he thinks," Kubiak said, drawing laughter. "But no, our relationship, it's been good. I coach him hard, but I have tremendous respect for him, and I think he knows that, and I need to listen to him. That's my job as a coach."

The relationship between the quarterback and his offensive coordinator/play caller is one of the most important dynamics within an NFL organization. A symbiotic relationship spurs confidence and trust, and often gets good results. A poor one results in unfulfilled potential and lost jobs.

Just ask the Chicago Bears, who benched veteran starter Jay Cutler less than a week after their offensive coordinator Aaron Kromer publicly acknowledged that he anonymously criticized Cutler in an NFL Network report.

Flacco and Kubiak have had no such issues and the seventh-year quarterback is thriving as the Ravens (9-5) head into a key AFC game Sunday against the Houston Texans (7-7) at NPG Stadium. Flacco, 29, is having arguably the finest season of his career and he acknowledged that Kubiak's steadying influence is one reason why.

"It's always good to come into work every day and have a positive mindset," Flacco said. "You're able to do a lot of things. You're able to get your work done, but you're also able to have a good time. I think that's so good for confidence with me, with Gary, with the whole unit. I think everybody can feel that.

"The way it translates onto the field is just with the confidence. We all come in here and have that same group goal and work together. There's nobody trying to go behind somebody's back and do this or that."

A season after he was a turnover or sack waiting to happen, Flacco is on pace to set career highs in passing yards (3,976), completion percentage (64.2), touchdown passes (26) and quarterback rating (94.8).

With two games remaining in the regular season, he's been sacked just 16 times — 32 fewer than last season — and he has nine interceptions after tossing a franchise-record 22 in 2013.

"I'm just playing, and that's the way it goes," Flacco said. "If you go out there and you play the way you're supposed to and you make the reads you're supposed to and your team is playing well and all that, then you shouldn't make that many mistakes as a quarterback. We have to make sure that we keep that going."

Good stretch

In the past four games, Flacco has thrown six touchdown passes and one interception, averaged 240 yards passing a game, completed just under 70 percent of his passing attempts and recorded a 107.2 quarterback rating, third best in the NFL during that span.

The stretch of solid play has come following a conversation that Kubiak and Flacco had after the bye week. At the time, Flacco was in a midseason slump, having thrown five interceptions over the previous four games. Kubiak told Flacco that he was simplifying the offense, getting back to the type of throws and routes that the quarterback had success with during his torrid start.

"I think we really grooved through the bye week of stopping and saying, 'OK, Joe, here's what I'm seeing, tell me what you think.' And I kind of let him call the game in a lot of ways," Kubiak said. "When you have a player like that, you need to listen, and I tried to do that. Hopefully I've done that well, but I think our relationship grows every week. I have a lot of confidence in him, and hopefully he has the same."

In earlier seasons, Flacco might have resented the suggestion to simplify things. He often jokes that if he had it his way, he'd be throwing the ball 50 times per game and staying in attack mode regardless of the score and situation. Anybody who has ever been around Flacco knows that he's extremely confident in himself and resolute in his beliefs about how the offense should operate.

His working relationship with former offensive coordinator Cam Cameron, who was fired late in the Ravens' Super Bowl season in 2012, grew icy because Flacco didn't feel that Cameron was giving him enough responsibility or taking his input.

"Joe is always confident regardless, but I think it's just been a little bit different with Kubs because they can relate," said Ravens wide receiver Torrey Smith. "You can tell their relationship is a little bit different. Not that he didn't love any of the coaches before, but I think it's the way Kubs goes about it, the way he operates. They've been a great match."

When Kubiak was hired in January after his predecessor, Jim Caldwell, was named the head coach of the Detroit Lions, he was Flacco's third offensive coordinator in about 13 months. Rick Dennison, one of Kubiak's long-time lieutenants and Houston's former offensive coordinator, became Flacco's fifth quarterback coach in his NFL career.

Kubiak, 53, came in with instant credibility. He played the position for nine NFL seasons. As a player or coach, he had worked with Hall of Fame quarterbacks John Elway and Steve Young.

"We've bought in from Day One," said Tyrod Taylor, Flacco's backup the past four seasons. "We knew it was going to be a different offense coming in. It could've been challenging at some points, early on, but we've bought in. I don't think Joe has fought back or anything. He's accepted that Kubiak is the guy and he's going to call the plays. It's our job to go out and perform well."

Hard on quarterbacks

Kubiak has long been regarded as a player's coach, though he's the first to admit that he's tough on quarterbacks. He's a stickler for fundamentals, which is why Kubiak and Dennison have the quarterbacks work on their footwork at the beginning of every practice.

He also has very little tolerance for stupid mistakes. When the Ravens' offense came to the sideline after a turnover in their game against the Jacksonville Jaguars last week, Kubiak called the players together and gave them a brief, yet stern, lecture.
Kubiak's focus is on the offense as a whole, though he remains extremely hands-on with the quarterbacks. As he comes off the field following a possession, Flacco typically heads right to Kubiak to talk things over. That's a significant departure from past seasons where the quarterback would head straight to the bench while the offensive coordinator was calling the game from the press box.

"You can look at a guy and say, 'Boy, he can do everything. He can do this.' But if you're not doing what he's comfortable with, you can be putting him in a bad situation," Kubiak said. "… His physical abilities are as good as I've ever been around. He works extremely hard at what he does. Joe is a grinder, hasn't missed a day of practice, hasn't missed a rep. I'm very impressed with that. He's very competitive, yet very much under control [on] game day. I could go on and on, but he's a big-time quarterback. He's a championship quarterback."

Kubiak has also made a significant effort to get to know Flacco on a personal level. During one of the summer minicamps, the two went out to dinner at Tark's Grill in Lutherville, and the get-to-know-you session made a big impression on Flacco because they talked far more about family than football.

Such dinners have continued throughout the regular season and have grown to include Dennison, the other quarterbacks, wives and girlfriends. Taylor and Flacco both said that the dinners have given the quarterbacks a good understanding of who the coaches are on a personal level.

"I think the biggest thing is Gary coming in here being who he is and me being who I am, we just happen to get along and have the same goals," Flacco said. "I think it's worked out well because of that."

Ravens' dominant pass rush proves invaluable

By Jamison Hensley

December 14, 2014

BALTIMORE -- Nobody talked about the last time the Baltimore Ravens played at M&T Bank Stadium. Even when the lowly Jacksonville Jaguars were one touchdown drive away from a stunning upset Sunday, the Ravens refused to bring up on the sideline about how the defense lost the San Diego game in the final minutes two weeks ago.

"It's kind of like Voldemort, the name we do not mention," outside linebacker Terrell Suggs said, alluding to the "Harry Potter" villain.

"It's kind of like an unspoken understanding. We're going to put it away, and we did it. Good teams don't make the same mistake twice."

What everyone will be talking about from this ugly and sloppy 20-12 win over the Jaguars is how invaluable their pass rush has become. They improved to 9-5 and moved into the No. 6 seed in the AFC because they sacked rookie quarterback Blake Bortles eight times, one shy of the franchise record. And they remain a half game behind of the first-place Cincinnati Bengals because they nearly recorded as many sacks (four) as completions allowed (five) in the fourth quarter.

The difference between the Ravens collapsing to the Chargers and putting away the Jaguars was the pressure put on the quarterback. The Ravens couldn't get to Philip Rivers late, which allowed their beaten-up secondary to get exposed. When they took turns in throwing Bortles to the ground Sunday, the Jaguars never got within 35 yards of the end zone in the final quarter.

Some will say the Ravens aren't a playoff team after their mistake-filled performance against the two-win Jaguars. The real statement made was how their pass rush can carry the team.

The Ravens' consistent running game faltered. Justin Tucker, the most accurate kicker in NFL history, missed twice. Another cornerback, Asa Jackson, could be lost for the season.
Still, the Ravens took another step toward earning a playoff spot for the sixth time in seven seasons. Five players recorded at least one sack for the Ravens: Suggs (2.5 sacks), defensive tackle Timmy Jernigan (2), linebacker Pernell McPhee (1.5), linebacker Elvis Dumervil (1) and linebacker C.J. Mosley (1).

The Jaguars did everything they could to steal this win, from an onside kick to a fake punt. The Ravens defense just never allowed Jacksonville to capitalize, holding an opponent out of the end zone for the second time this season on the strength of the relentless pressure. The Ravens delivered 15 hits on Bortles, an average of one every three dropbacks.

The challenge of trying to slow down the Ravens' rush is where to begin. Suggs and Dumervil are charging off the edge. Jernigan, who is filling in for suspended defensive tackle Haloti Ngata, and McPhee are collapsing the middle. You can't chip a running back and double-team everyone.

"A scheme can only take you so far," Suggs said. "At the end of the day, the players got to execute it and it comes down to you've got to beat a guy. And we've got guys that [are] beating a guy."

It's not just competing against the offensive linemen. The secret to the Ravens' pass-rush success is the competition among teammates.

"I think guys are competing more for who has the sack than how many sacks we get," Mosley said.

This starts at the top. Dumervil extended his franchise single-season sacks record to 17, and Suggs trails him by six. This has become a source of motivation for Suggs.

"I'm going to line up every day and try to catch [Dumervil], as you can clearly see," Suggs said. "We've got two left. But if I don't, I'll take two wins. I will gladly do so and finish 11-5. That should be enough to get us in [the playoffs]."

As long as the Ravens' run to the playoffs matches their pursuit of quarterbacks, the Ravens are virtually guaranteed of making the postseason.

Teams Won't Want To See Ravens In January

If the balanced Ravens advance to the postseason, hold off on declaring them one-and-done.

By John Eisenberg
BaltimoreRavens.com
December 13, 2014

I don't have any hard evidence backing this up, but from monitoring what's being written and said, I get the feeling many fans doubt the Ravens would last too long in the playoffs if they were to make it.

I understand why there's skepticism. The Ravens are 8-5, so they're hardly infallible. Their prospects appeared dubious as recently as last Sunday in the first quarter. And their pass defense has struggled against top quarterbacks such as Ben Roethlisberger, Philip Rivers and Drew Brees, exactly the kind you see in the playoffs.

Still, I would hold off on declaring that the Ravens are bound to fall short if they make the postseason.

Sure, they have issues, but every team does, even good ones. Did you see Green Bay's defense against Atlanta Monday night? Meanwhile, it may surprise you to know that few teams can match the Ravens' overall balance.

Of the league's 32 teams, only two are ranked in the top 10 in both scoring offense and scoring defense. The New England Patriots are one. They'll probably be the AFC's No. 1 seed. The only other team ranked in both top 10s is (drum roll, please), that's right, your Baltimore Ravens.

They're No. 7 in the league in scoring offense, averaging 27.4 points per game. Their offense is humming under Gary Kubiak's direction. And despite their shaky pass defense, they're actually ranked higher in scoring defense at No. 6, allowing just 19.6 points per game.

The Ravens also have by far the most effective special teams units in the AFC, according to Football Outsiders, an analytics website. Justin Tucker is perfect inside the 50. Sam Koch leads the Pro Bowl balloting. Jacoby Jones leads the league in average yards per kickoff return. The Ravens get a boost in these areas almost every week.
I don't know how the Ravens might fare if they were to make the playoffs, but I do know this: their combination of offense, defense and special teams, along with their history of playoff success, makes them a team that other contenders would rather not see in January.

They still have to make the field, of course, which is hardly assured. A tough road game in Houston looms next week. The AFC North race is wildly unpredictable. The battle for wild-card spots is heavily populated. The Ravens lost their margin for error by blowing three fourth-quarter leads earlier in the season. (Here's a fact: They would be on the outside looking in if the playoffs began today, but if they had scored just two more points against San Diego, they would be in first place in the division.)

In any case, their schedule is favorable, starting with Sunday's game against the Jacksonville Jaguars at M&T Bank Stadium. The Jaguars are winless on the road this season and 2-11 overall. You can't ask for a better assignment when you're fighting to make the playoffs.
It's been a season of ups and downs, but a win by the Ravens on Sunday would give them a 3-1 record since their mid-November bye, a streak that suggests they're gaining momentum at the right time.

If they keep rolling right into the playoffs, the scenarios are almost infinite, some better than others, but all within the realm of possibility.

Favored by two touchdowns over the Jaguars, the Ravens hope to make this a slightly less stressful Sunday. If the outcome does become apparent relatively early, I suggest you take your eye off the ball and train your binoculars on Marshal Yanda, the Ravens' right guard.

Hey, do it regardless. Yanda, 30, is having a phenomenal season. According to the Pro Football Focus website, which grades every player every week, he's the best offensive lineman in the NFL this year.

When the Ravens went for it on fourth-and-1 at their 34 in the third quarter last Sunday, they ran a quarterback sneak behind Yanda and center Jeremy Zuttah, picked up the first down and went on to score a touchdown that gave them the lead for keeps. Asked about the play the next day, Head Coach John Harbaugh praised the whole line but singled out his right guard.

"Marshal Yanda – I just watched the tape – Marshal Yanda, man, he came off the ball," Harbaugh declared.

It's happening a lot.

Elvis Dumervil, Terrell Suggs Lead NFL's Sack Duos

The Ravens pass rushers are breaking franchise records. But there are more goals on the horizon.

By Ryan Mink
BaltimoreRavens.com
December 11, 2014

Elvis Dumervil had just sacked Saints quarterback Drew Brees on Monday Night Football, triggering a reported $1 million incentive clause in his contract.

What did he talk about on the sideline?

He sat down next to fellow outside linebacker Terrell Suggs and did some calculations on where it put them in the race to be the NFL's top sack duo. The two were fully aware of not only how many sacks they had, but their top competition out in Denver, too.

No, they weren't leading at the time, but they are now.

Dumervil (16) and Suggs (8.5) have combined for 24.5 sacks this season. They already have topped the Ravens' previous franchise duo sack record set by Trevor Pryce and Adalius Thomas (24 sacks) in 2006. Now they want to finish as the league leaders.
Denver's Von Miller and DeMarcus Ware are on their heels with a combined 23 sacks. Buffalo's Mario Wiliams and Marcell Dareus aren't too far behind either with 22.
"I'm going to downplay it as much as I can. We want to get after the passer every week, but we also want to be up there in numbers as a duo," Suggs said with a grin.

"I think we got a tremendous amount of disrespect during the offseason that we weren't even considered amongst the top duo. But I think that'll probably change come this next offseason."

Being recognized as part of the league's top duo is nothing new for Dumervil. He and Miller led the NFL with 29.5 sacks in 2012. In 2009, when Dumervil had a career-high 17 sacks, he and Vonnie Holliday were also in the running.

"I've been there before twice, so I definitely want to do that with Terrell," Dumervil said. "He's been disruptive on his side. It allows me to have one-on-ones, and vice versa. So, we both can take advantage of one-on-ones. It definitely helps our defense."

The Ravens pass rush is largely helping keep the defense afloat considering all the injuries in the secondary. If Baltimore can force opponents into passing situations, either by stuffing the run on early downs or by getting a lead, Dumervil and Suggs can feast.

It's what Baltimore envisioned when it brought in Dumervil last offseason. Now it's coming to fruition.

Suggs and Dumervil had explosive first halves to the season last year. Dumervil had 8.5 sacks in the first nine games and Suggs had nine in his first eight.

But they trailed off in the second half. Dumervil had just one sack in his final seven games, in part due to a high-ankle sprain that forced him out of one game entirely. Suggs notched one sack in his final eight contests.

This year, Dumervil and Suggs are both healthy and mindful to stay that way down the stretch.

"It's just being pros, taking care of your body," Dumervil said. "Terrell is the ultimate pro with that – cold tub, working out, eating healthy. Those things go a long way and it shows at the end of the year. It's not about who works the hardest. It's who works the smartest."

Last week, Dumervil became the Ravens' franchise single-season sack leader last week with 3.5 takedowns in Miami, breaking a 13-year old record previously held by Peter Boulware. He doesn't expect it to last forever, saying "records are meant to be broken." Dumervil previously set the Broncos' all-time single-season sack record with 17 in 2009. Miller topped him three years later with 18.5.

But for now, being atop the Ravens' franchise list means something special to Dumervil.

"When I decided to come to Baltimore, it was one of the reasons I wanted to come here because of the proud defensive [tradition] that has been here – Ray Lewis, Ed Reed, Peter Boulware, those guys," he said. "So, to be a part of something like that, it's humbling."

Now he has one more individual goal on the horizon.

Dumervil has a piece of paper simply with "23" written on it taped to the inside of his locker. That's how many sacks it would take to break New York Giants Hall of Famer Michael Strahan's all-time NFL single-season sack record, set in 2001.

"Twenty-three. It seems like it's so far away, right?" Dumervil said.

Maybe not. This week's prey, the Jacksonville Jaguars, have allowed the most sacks in the league by far with 54. The next closest team, the Washington Redskins, have allowed 46. By comparison, the Ravens have surrendered 16.

John Harbaugh remains in elite coaching club

By Jamison Hensley
ESPN.com
December 11, 2014

OWINGS MILLS, Md. -- The Baltimore Ravens' win over the Miami Dolphins kept the team in the playoff hunt and John Harbaugh in an exclusive coaching club.

With the Ravens securing their eighth win Sunday, Harbaugh remains one of four coaches in NFL history to win a Super Bowl and not have a losing season. This elite list includes: Vince Lombardi, John Madden, Mike Tomlin and Harbaugh. While there's a mutual respect with Tomlin, Harbaugh was awestruck when told that he shares an accomplishment with two Hall of Fame coaches in Lombardi and Madden.

"I can't believe it. That's amazing," Harbaugh said. "I've been blessed to get to know John Madden. We have a kind of relationship that he's mentoring a lot of us guys where I can call him up and talk to him anytime. Vince Lombardi is the icon of all our youth. Put it this way, there'd be no comparison question there. You can all safely say that."

In his seventh season, Harbaugh owns the fourth-best winning percentage (.648) among active NFL head coaches, compiling a 79-43 record. He is the only head coach in NFL history to win a playoff game in each of his first four and five seasons.

This season has been one of Harbaugh's best coaching jobs when you consider the amount of challenges the team has overcome. The Ravens (8-5) are a half-game out of first place in the AFC North despite the Ray Rice scandal, the suspension of Pro Bowl defensive tackle Haloti Ngata and eight starters (tight ends Dennis Pitta and Owen Daniels, offensive tackle Eugene Monroe, guard Kelechi Osemele, defensive end Chris Canty, cornerbacks Jimmy Smith, Lardarius Webb and Asa Jackson) missing at least one game to injury.

Harbaugh's strength is to never dwell on the past and constantly look forward. When Ngata was suspended last week, Harbaugh simply announced the news at the start of the team meeting before saying, "OK, let's go to work."

Quarterback Joe Flacco was asked about why the Ravens can handle adversity so well and he pointed immediately to Harbaugh.

"It starts with John and his attitude that he brings to the team meeting room ... and it filters throughout the rest of us," Flacco said. "So, we are able to keep that levelheadedness and keep the same mentality no matter what's happened the previous week."

Flacco said Harbaugh provides the guidance on how to handle difficulties.

"I think he's so comfortable and so confident in what he is doing that he can portray that to all of us and we can [follow his lead]," Flacco said. "Let's just say adversity is losing a game. We all don't feel good coming in here on Tuesday after a loss. But when you see your head coach get up there and, while he is fiery, he is still confident about getting back to work and going out there the next week … I think he's been doing a really good job with that, and that's with everything."

Despite loss of Haloti Ngata, Ravens and Terrell Suggs have unfinished business

By Mike Preston
The Baltimore Sun
December 6, 2014

There have been few times during his 12-year NFL career when Terrell Suggs has been at a loss for words, but the thought of him wearing a yellow jacket and standing next to a bronzed bust of himself only forces a smile.

"Wow," said Suggs, glancing up at the sky and thinking about the Pro Football Hall of Fame. "I don't want to sit back and reflect on my career yet because it is not time. But if that happened ... Wow."

Suggs doesn't have to talk because the resume speaks for itself. He has been on some of the league's best defenses, been to six Pro Bowls, won a Super Bowl and been named both the NFL's defensive Rookie of the Year in 2003 and Defensive Player of the Year in 2011.

"I don't know if there has ever been a player who has won defensive player of the year two times and not gotten in," said Ravens general manager Ozzie Newsome, a Hall of Fame tight end.
But Suggs, 32, isn't looking that far ahead. He says he has a few more years left to play — and maybe a top defensive honor to win — and there is the unfinished business of the 2014 season.

Vying for at least a wild-card spot with four games remaining, but the Ravens (7-5) have the 31st- ranked pass defense in the league. And things got more difficult on Thursday, when the NFL suspended star defensive tackle Haloti Ngata for four games for violating its substance abuse policy.

The Ravens will look for others to step up their games, but they know they will need a Herculean effort from Suggs because of the leadership void left by Ngata.

Can the player known as "The Siz" take his game to a higher level and allow his teammates to hitch a ride into the postseason?

"Absolutely," said former Ravens left tackle Jonathan Ogden, inducted into the Hall of Fame in 2013. "He is still playing at a high level, very crafty with his moves and managing the game. He has always played the run very well, even though not as good this year. It really depends on the matchups, and he is probably going to win most of them."

The Ravens have been preparing Suggs, defensive lineman Chris Canty and inside linebacker Daryl Smith for this time of the season. A year ago, the veterans slowed down and showed signs of age.

Coach John Harbaugh has cut down Suggs' snaps during games. He has also forced him to slow down in practices much like they did with inside linebacker Ray Lewis near the end of his career.

It's no secret that Suggs isn't the spry, unrelenting player he was six years ago, but he is fourth on the team in tackles with 41 and has seven sacks — proving he can still get after the quarterback.

"Great pass rushers will always be able to rush the passer because he has that knack," Newsome said. "He loves practice, being in the building, the game itself and the passion has not left him. ... Plus, Siz will continue to have success because of the other guys playing on the defensive front with him."

Outside linebacker Elvis Dumervil has 12.5 sacks this season and will draw just as many slides in protection as Suggs. Tackle Brandon Williams has been able to collapse the pocket at times and outside linebacker Pernell McPhee has been able to get pressure occasionally from inside or out.

To get better matchups for Suggs, the Ravens have rushed him up the middle in the last two games to blow by centers and guards.

"He will school a lot of young tackles," Ogden said. "When I was young, Bruce Smith was a veteran but he couldn't beat me with that same old okie-doke. Once you get a little older, everyone starts to slow down, that's just natural."

Suggs has 101.5 career sacks, which is 28th all-time. He long ago broke the Ravens' career mark of 70 set by former outside linebacker Peter Boulware (1997-2005).

Boulware, though, was a speed rusher. Suggs isn't as fast or mobile as Boulware, but plays with more power. Suggs is a thick 6-foot-5 and 270 pounds.

"I was the guy who got wide, timed up the snap and tried to beat the guy around the corner by getting my shoulder underneath," Boulware said. "Terrell has been a top pass rusher for so long because he can do that, or just overpower you with a bull rush."

But he isn't just a pass rusher. Those around the league say Suggs is just as effective against the run. Seven times throughout his career Suggs has had more than 70 tackles in a season.

"The thing that sets him apart is the way he plays versus the run," Newsome said. "There have been and still are some great edge players in the game, but I don't know many that can play against the tackle, destroy the tight end or defeat a guard or fullback coming to kick them out. He is truly a three-down player."

It wasn't that way when Suggs left Arizona State. As a rookie, Suggs with blessed with all the physical gifts, but his No. 1 priority was getting to the quarterback.

But also in his first year, the Ravens were making the transition from playing a 4-3 defense to a 3-4. Suggs struggled because he played end in college and was being moved to outside linebacker. The Ravens decided to use him strictly as a pass rusher that season.

So each day, Suggs butted heads with Ogden.

"Willie Roaf kicked my butt a couple of times," Suggs said. "Larry Allen was a guard, but one time in San Francisco he took me with one hand and threw me out of the play. Walter Jones was pretty tough, too."
"J.O., though, will probably be the best to ever play the game. I can honestly say I beat J.O. in a pass rush maybe one time and that was when he had that bad toe coming down the stretch. You learn more in failure than you do in success."
It was all part of the maturation process for Suggs, who admits that he and Ngata, his close friend, are good-natured, overgrown kids.

To get into the Hall of Fame would be a childhood dream. Suggs grew up admiring Lawrence Taylor, Derrick Thomas and Bruce Smith. As a St. Paul, Minn., native his favorite team was the Minnesota Vikings and he loved watching outside linebacker Chris Doleman and defensive tackle John Randle play.

Suggs' quarterback sack list goes from the Steelers' Tommy Maddox to the Chargers' Philip Rivers. He has sacked Pittsburgh's Ben Roethlisberger more than any other quarterback, but his favorite target might be New England's Tom Brady. They don't talk to each other even though they are on the same team at the Pro Bowl.

"I talk to their other guys, like Logan Mankins," said Suggs of the former Patriots' guard. "He laughs with me because he likes when I give Brady crap because nobody else messes with the golden boy."

The 100th sack, which came against the New Orleans Saints' Drew Brees on Nov. 24, was a benchmark for Hall of Fame discussion. He'll have to wait at least five years after he retires to get nominated and there are other great pass rushers ahead of him like Charles Haley and Kevin Greene, but Suggs has been noticed.

"Suggs has had a fine career and will obviously be discussed when the time is right," said Jarret Bell, a Hall of Fame voter from USA Today. "Will Suggs garner serious discussion? That's probably a good bet. When he plays against the Steelers, he surely reminds me of Lawrence Taylor. So much intensity. In general, it's not easy to compare him to others — which will be good for his case one day. I see some Haley and Derrick Thomas in Suggs because of his explosion off the edge, and I see some Rickey Jackson and Ted Hendricks, too, because of his versatility"

Suggs, though, is focused on Miami. He'll play extra hard because the Ravens will be without Ngata, who he admires.

"Off the field Haloti is an amazing guy. People don't know that about him," Suggs said. "In 2006, we got Haloti in here and we saw that we had an opportunity to do some things, that's when we said 'All right, it's time to win a championship.' "

A strong performance down the stretch would help cement Suggs' legacy, especially since the Ravens have been through a lot of turmoil this season.

"If Suggs continues to build his resume as an elite pass rusher I'd certainly consider him for induction," said NFL reporter John McClain, a Hall of Fame voter.

Ravens kicker Justin Tucker making field goals at historic rate

By Jeff Zrebiec
The Baltimore Sun
December 5, 2014

There have been nine misses in all — divided evenly among his three NFL seasons — and Ravens kicker Justin Tucker admits he probably can recount what went wrong on each of them.

In his younger days, he obsessed over an ill-timed wind gust or a slippery landing spot. Now, Tucker is only concerned about the next swing of his right leg and opportunity to do what no kicker has ever done any better.

"I don't even think about what has happened in the past. I don't even think about what happened last weekend to be honest with you," Tucker said after the Ravens finished practice Thursday in preparation for Sunday's game against the Miami Dolphins. "I'm thinking about each practice day, I'm thinking about each kick that I go out there and attempt in our field goal and field goal block period of practice. That's probably as cliched as it gets in sports — taking it one kick at a time. But that's what's been successful, so I'm not going to change it up any time soon."

How successful? When he went 4-for-4 last Sunday in the Ravens' loss to the San Diego Chargers, Tucker solidified his standing as the most accurate kicker in NFL history. In his career, he's made 93-of-102 field-goal tries, and he's hit 59 of his past 60 attempts from under 55 yards.

Matt Stover, who kicked 13 seasons for the Ravens, is the NFL's 15th most accurate kicker all-time, having made 83.7 percent (471 of 563) of attempted field goals in his 19-year career.

Even in an age where kickers are converting from a longer distance and at a more consistent rate, Tucker's 91.2 field-goal percentage is the best among kickers with a minimum of 100 attempts. Dallas Cowboys kicker Dan Bailey (90.2) and former Raven and current Seattle Seahawk Steven Hauschka (86.8) rank second and third all-time.
"No matter what the era is, that's an incredible accomplishment," said Chris Sailer, an acclaimed kicking and punting instructor who has worked with several of the league's top kickers, including Tucker, Bailey, the Minnesota Vikings' Blair Walsh and the New York Jets' Nick Folk.

"You think of how many guys have worked on that skill and to have that distinction, it is beyond impressive. It's comparative to what Peyton Manning is doing as a quarterback. It's comparative to what the great running backs like Emmitt Smith and Walter Payton have done. It's remarkable. I know the percentages (league-wide) are up but to be the very best of that group at this point in time is remarkable."

Tucker, the AFC Special Teams Player of the Month for November, has made 25-of-28 field-goal attempts this season, including 13 in a row. His lone misses this year were from 55, 57 and 64 yards and the 64-yarder was blocked by the Tampa Bay Buccaneers. Eight kickers have missed fewer than three field goals this season, including the ageless Adam Vinatieri, who is perfect on 25 attempts for the Indianapolis Colts.

Tucker has long looked up to Vintaieri, who has been in the NFL for 19 seasons and is generally considered the most clutch kicker in NFL history. But Tucker, 25, admits that it's one of his goals to be considered the best at what he does.

"If I wasn't trying to have that attached to my name, then what am I doing?," Tucker said. "First and foremost, we're all trying to win and we're all trying to kind of write our legacy as a team. But of course, we all want to write our own legacies as individuals, and of course, it needs to be known that it's within the framework of something bigger."

Signed as an undrafted free agent, Tucker beat out Billy Cundiff in the 2012 training camp and made 30 of 33 field goals during his rookie season, which ended with the Ravens winning Super Bowl XLVII. Tucker was 4-for-4 in the postseason and his 47-yarder in double overtime against the Denver Broncos in the divisional round was one of the biggest kicks in Ravens history.
Tucker, who made the Pro Bowl last year after making 38 of 41 attempts, has seven career game-winning field goals.

"I think Justin is special because he brings a supreme confidence about him," said Sailer, who started working with Tucker when he was in high school. "He really expects to make everything. The guys that you see have long careers, all have that same mentality. It's an expectation of success."

Ravens associate head coach and special teams coordinator Jerry Rosburg credited Tucker's success to his preparation, which he says has improved every year.

Tucker is always fine-tuning his technique, but this season, he's focused more on preparing for certain situations, like adjusting to different field and weather conditions, and learning how to compensate for how his body is feeling that day.

"I feel like I've definitely gotten better from my rookie season to my second season to now my third season," Tucker said. "It's a combination of things from improving my technique, grounding myself in certain situations that are new or challenging. I haven't had to overhaul anything really since I've been here. It's just a matter of trying to build upon doing one thing positive one day and carrying it into the next one."

Marshal Yanda is quietly becoming one of the Ravens' all-time greats

By Childs Walker
The Baltimore Sun
November 27, 2014

Try this idea on for size: Marshal Yanda is one of the greatest players in Ravens history.

An offensive guard? Really? Yeah, really.

Let's start the case with Ravens offensive coordinator Gary Kubiak on the stand. Kubiak has coached and played with his share of excellent offensive linemen. Already, he'd put Yanda near the top of the list.

"Yes, I've told John [Harbaugh] that," Kubiak says. "He's as good as any I've ever been around, and I've been around some great ones. I'm so impressed with the technician that he is, how hard he plays, how tough he is, the things he plays through. He's a consistent body of work."

All right, how about the view of a pretty smart rookie looking for NFL role models?

"He's the type of guy where, when I'm watching film, I watch what he does on every single play," Ravens guard John Urschel says. "That's how good he is. … Listen, if I end up being like Marshal Yanda in four or five years, I'll be more than happy with my career. That guy's the real deal."

You want outside views? Yanda's peers voted him the league's 55th best player in the NFL Network's annual preseason poll. He was the second-ranked offensive lineman and one of only two guards to make the list at all.

The analysts at Pro Football Focus grade every play of every game, and by their reckoning, Yanda has been a top-10 player at his position — guard or tackle — in five of the six seasons he's started more than half his team's games. Last year, playing with a shoulder still weakened from rotator cuff surgery, he graded as the NFL's 15th-best guard.

"He's definitely one of the best linemen in the league," says Steve Palazzolo, a senior analyst for Pro Football Focus. "He can play the power game and maul people but then you see some of the reach blocks he makes, and he moves awfully quickly over a short space."

The entire Ravens line suffered through a disappointing 2013. But now that Yanda, 30, is healthy again, he's playing arguably the best football of his career in his eighth season. Pro Football Focus says the gap between him and the next best guard, the Cleveland Browns' Joel Bitonio, is greater than the gap between Bitonio and the 10th best player at the position. ESPN analyst Jon Gruden gushed over the holes Yanda and Kelechi Osemele opened for Justin Forsett in the Ravens' Monday night victory in New Orleans.

'Always finishing to the whistle'

OK, enough with the accolades. What says Yanda to the notion he's an all-time great Raven, behind only former teammate Jonathan Ogden among all the franchise's offensive linemen?

It's Friday afternoon before the New Orleans trip and he's still flushed and sweaty from practice. He starts with a self-deprecating snort. He's trying to humor the question but with the Saints looming in three days, he can't go there.

"It's tough, because I'm a team guy, and I don't worry about that stuff," Yanda says. "If I'm worried about that stuff, then I'm not worried about what's most important, which is blocking New Orleans. If you get in that mindset, you're going to take steps backward. You can go from the top to the bottom in a half. Not a game, not a year. In a half."

And there you have it, an athlete who's great in part because he never stops to think about how great he is. Yes, it's easy to fall into cliché when discussing Yanda, the unbreakable Iowa farm boy who achieves beyond his physical gifts and hates talking about himself as anything more than a classic football grunt.
You read stories about him from over the years and toughness is the common theme. The most widely repeated episode is the $600 bet he won as a rookie when he took two jolts from a stun gun wielded by disbelieving Ravens veterans. "Easiest money I ever made," he said at the time, noting he'd taken worse shocks brushing against the electrified cattle fences on his family's dairy farm.

Others marvel at the way he played through the Ravens' 2013 Super Bowl run with that torn rotator cuff, which required surgery five days after the last snap of the season. "Who does that?" asks Kirk Ferentz, Yanda's college coach at Iowa and also a former Ravens line coach.

But these stories circulate often enough and they become almost cute, which doesn't fit Yanda's self-conception. He's not interested in being a folk hero. He's simply devoted to pushing through whatever he must to be a great offensive lineman week after week, year after year. Consistent is his favorite word.
Look at his His Pro Football Focus game grades and they're almost numbing — positive scores for weeks on end. Positive for both run and pass blocking. Positive whether he was playing at guard or right tackle, a position he manned earlier in his career.

It speaks to a man whose mind remains locked on football every day during the season. No leaving the game at the office for Yanda. He believes such paranoia is warranted for a job that can subject him to public mockery if he screws up two plays out of 60.

Every practice, he does his best not to loaf, lest he set a poor example for younger teammates. Every night, he plays with his children, 4-year-old Graham and 2-year-old Elizabeth, then settles in to watch film. Every play, he looks for another opponent to hit until the referee's whistle blows the action dead.

Want to know why Yanda is so often in the middle of on-field shoving and yapping? "I think guys get into it with him, because he's always finishing to the whistle," says Ravens center Gino Gradkowski. "He might get under guys' skins always doing that."

'He'll be out there'

Pain is part of the routine, something to be accepted as the price for doing what Yanda loves. "You have to understand it's not if you're going to get hurt, it's when," he says matter of factly. Yanda had never been injured in high school or college. "I thought I was just different," he says, mocking his youthful outlook. But then he blew out his knee five games into his second pro season.

Since then, some part of him has hurt pretty much all the time.

"But you'll never know, never hear about [it]," says rookie tackle James Hurst. "If there's any way that guy can be out there, he'll be out there."

Guard is actually the perfect position for Yanda's stoic personality. He can do his job better than anyone in the world, receive handsome pay ($32 million over five years) and universal respect from his peers and still face less public attention than your average back-up quarterback.

He wasn't always this picture of professionalism. Growing up in Anamosa, a town of 5,500 in Eastern Iowa, Yanda let his grades slip to the point he had to attend junior college instead of pursuing a four-year scholarship. With that jolt of reality and numerous kicks in the rear from his strict mother, Ruth Byrd, he shaped up and set his sights on the Big Ten.

Ferentz remembers Yanda hanging around Iowa's facilities "like a dog who won't leave your porch."

The coach didn't like using roster spots on junior college players, whom he regarded as poor risks. And he half-regretted giving Yanda a shot when he saw how stiff the kid looked in summer workouts. "He wasn't very impressive," Ferentz recalls. "And that's being kind."

This would become a theme for Yanda, who's the opposite of a workout warrior. At the NFL scouting combine, he'd impress virtually no one with a 40-yard dash time of 5.15 seconds and 23 repetitions in the 225-pound bench press.

Even now, Yanda hardly stands out in an NFL locker room. He neither towers over his teammates, as Ogden did, nor ripples with muscle like Terrell Suggs, who dresses a few lockers down. He's just another beefy guy with ruddy features. But once Yanda donned his pads, Ferentz watched him transform into a different animal, one who'd hit anything that moved and hard.

"During his senior year, I told all the pro guys, 'Look, your coaches are going to hate him when they see him running around in shorts, but once they see him play actual football, they'll come back and thank you for drafting him,'" Ferentz says.

'He always finds a way'

The Ravens saw exactly what Ferentz promised, picking Yanda in the third round in 2007 despite having already drafted another guard, Ben Grubbs, in the first round.

As a rookie, Yanda got his one chance to play with Ogden, a future Hall of Famer whom he'd heard all about from Ferentz. He observed Ogden's intelligence in team meetings and the great tackle's competitive meanness on Sunday. But study as he might, Yanda would never be 6-foot-9 with dancer's feet and arms as long as javelins.

"I couldn't do anything he could do," Yanda says with an awed laugh.

It was an important lesson. He had to know his own strengths — diligence and a thirst for contact — and play to them.

"He's definitely a scrapper, a guy who will get it done no matter how he has to do it," Gradkowski says. "I think he would pride himself on that. It doesn't always look pretty, but he always finds a way to get it done."

Now Yanda's the guy studied by younger players. He's made three Pro Bowls with a fourth seemingly inevitable this year. And he's a quiet cornerstone of one of the league's most consistent winners.

"I knew he was a good player when I came here," Kubiak says. "But man, is he impressive — not only as a player, too, but as a person, how he goes about getting ready to play."

Yanda has some notions about his post-playing career. He and his wife of three years, Shannon, are expecting their third child in February. They plan to retire to their native Iowa, probably to a farm. Yanda says he'll shed some of his 305-pound playing weight to reduce strain on his joints.

But those visions seem as far away as the post-career awards — Ravens Ring of Honor, even the Hall of Fame ballot — he doesn't care to discuss. There's a game coming Sunday, and Yanda has to get ready.

Justin Forsett's unlikely journey to a career year

By Jamison Hensley
ESPN.com
November 24, 2014

Justin Forsett's dazzling performance Monday night was more than another chance to prove doubters wrong, it was a chance for the Baltimore Ravens' running back to show that he still plays in the NFL.

Forsett remembers reading the comments that followed Adam Schefter’s tweet announcing his release from the Jacksonville Jaguars in March.

“Who?”

“That wasn’t worth a tweet”

“According to my sources, we have never heard of this guy”

Eight months later, Forsett is enjoying one of the best seasons of any running back. He has gone from a little-known journeyman to the most valuable player for a Ravens team that is looking to return to the playoffs after a one-year absence.

Forsett helped the Ravens take another step toward that goal by rushing for 182 yards and two touchdowns in a 34-27 win over the New Orleans Saints.

"It’s special," Forsett said during an on-field interview with ESPN after the game. "I put in a lot of work throughout my whole career, being in the shadows and just coming out here tonight just trying to show what I can do. And [head coach John] Harbaugh and the Ravens giving me a chance to do what I do, it’s a blessing."

It’s difficult to imagine where the Ravens would be if they hadn’t taken a flier on Forsett. In a season when the Ravens parted ways with the No. 2 rusher in franchise history (Ray Rice), they have one of the top rushing attacks in the NFL, primarily because of Forsett.

Breaking tackles and outrunning defenders, Forsett ranked seventh in the NFL in rushing yards (721) entering Week 12 and first in yards per carry (5.4). For a player who has had to grind it out throughout his career, he has made an impact this season with explosive plays. Only Dallas’ DeMarco Murray, the NFL’s leading rusher, has had more runs over 20 yards than Forsett.

"I'm sure there are still some people who are surprised," Forsett said recently. "I'm OK with surprising people."

No one expected Forsett to have a career year. He acknowledges that he didn't know if he had an NFL future this offseason.

After being released by the four-win Jaguars, Forsett started to think about life after football. It was about time to give up on that fleeting dream of becoming a starter in the NFL.
That's what happens to most veteran running backs who are coming off the worst season of their career (31 yards on six carries) and aren't immediately signed in free agency. Forsett began making inroads to a career in player development, so he could impact lives while remaining a part of the game.

"During the offseason, my future was kind of bleak," Forsett said.

Landing with Ravens

Opportunity eventually came calling. Actually, it was Gary Kubiak, Forsett's head coach in Houston, who was looking for more depth at running back in his first season as the Ravens' offensive coordinator.

The Ravens had just missed on signing free agent Chris Johnson (who went to the New York Jets), and Kubiak vouched for Forsett. It was two years ago when Forsett averaged a career-best 5.9 yards per carry as a role player in Kubiak's offense in Houston.

Not everyone with the Ravens was sold on Forsett initially.

"I didn't see it," Ravens general manager Ozzie Newsome told the team's website. "[Harbaugh] and Gary liked him, but when I watched the tape from Jacksonville, I didn't see the same quickness Justin had shown earlier in his career. In the end, we trusted Gary that Justin was a good fit for the offense we were installing."

When he signed with the Ravens in April for a one-year, veteran minimum deal, Forsett talked about carrying a chip the size of Texas on his shoulder. Forsett, who had been limited last season with a foot injury, soon began gaining attention in offseason spring workouts and training camp with unexpected burst and power.
At 5-foot-8, 197 pounds, he resembled a "poor man's Darren Sproles." But he let it be known that he doesn't care for the label "scatback."

"There's always going to be doubters," Forsett said. "There's always going to be people that want to limit me and put me in boxes. It's my job to go out and try to break them."

Still, one of the biggest surprise stories in the NFL wasn't going to unfold by itself.

The abrupt release of Rice a day after the season opener -- which came soon after the elevator footage surfaced of him striking his then-fiancée -- led to an open competition at running back. The Ravens had planned to use a running back by committee with Forsett, Bernard Pierce and Lorenzo Taliaferro.

"All of the sudden with his play, [Forsett] said, 'No, you're going to play me,'" Kubiak said. "You have to give him the credit for that happening."

Feel-good story

Forsett was a seventh-round draft pick in 2008, selected 178 spots after Rice in that draft. Of the 23 running backs drafted that year, only six remain in the league and Forsett is the only one past the third round. Gone are the likes of Felix Jones, Rashard Mendenhall, Kevin Smith and Steve Slaton.

In his rookie season, Forsett bounced around from Seattle to Indianapolis to Seattle again. In the past three years, he went from Houston to Jacksonville and now to Baltimore.

Forsett has probably accrued more airline mileage points than rushing yards in his career.

"You've been through a journey, the ups and downs, and able to persevere and be here," Forsett said. "It's a blessing. You know it can easily be taken away when you've been on a rough journey. There is definitely an appreciation."

Forsett has been a mature influence in the Ravens' locker room. He is considered one of the best character guys on the team, almost to point where you have trouble believing it.
He spent his bye week changing diapers and getting up early with his nearly 2-year-old son, Judah, so his wife could get a break. He even wrote a love song to her that he put on YouTube a couple of years ago.

Forsett tweets out reminders to vote for his teammates for the Pro Bowl, including his lead blocker Kyle Juszczyk, and never puts out ones for himself.

"He is one of the nicest guys I've ever met, whether you're talking about in the locker room or in life," said tight end Owen Daniels, who has been Forsett's teammate with the Texans and Ravens.
Forsett made sure to credit his offensive linemen Monday.

"The (lanes) were big," he said. "The offensive line did a great job of making those lanes open for me, and I just tried to seize the moment." Has Forsett ever done anything to tick anyone off?

“He’s ticked off some defenses,” Daniels said. “I’m sure there are some defenders who are mad at him for outrunning them or making them miss.”

Can he sustain it?

Forsett has never carried the ball more than 118 times in his previous six seasons. He’s already run the ball 155 times this season. If there is one question left for Forsett to answer, it’s this one: Can he maintain this level of productivity and not wear down?

“He’s a tremendously conditioned player when he works out here,” Kubiak said. “He takes care of himself. I don’t see any reason for him not to keep going.”

Forsett has become a barometer for the Ravens’ success. When the Ravens rush for 120 yards or more as a team, they are undefeated (7-0). When they don’t, they are winless (0-4). In the Ravens’ past four wins, Forsett has run for 111, 95, 112 and 182 yards.

“We’re getting down to the last six weeks, and you’re not saving much for anything, right? It’s time to go,” Kubiak said. “I know Justin wants to be out there every down, and if he can hold up, he’s probably going to be out there quite a bit.”

“I couldn’t have written this story any better,” Forsett said.

Sam Koch's Effectiveness 'Off The Charts'

Punter Sam Koch has been winning the important field position game with opponents.

By Ryan Mink
BaltimoreRavens.com
November 24, 2014

It’s not the most glamorous part of the game, but field position is a big part of it. And Ravens punter Sam Koch is winning at that game. After an admittedly tough 2013 season and a rookie challenger in training camp, Koch is having a superb year thus far in Baltimore.

“His numbers are off the charts in terms of his effectiveness,” Head Coach John Harbaugh said Monday.

“We’ve had very few returns against us, especially in the last four weeks against great returners, and Sam has been a big part of that.”

Koch is tied for third in the league with 19 punts inside the 20-yard line this season. He’s had just two touchbacks. Only five other punters have that few. Koch’s 42.2-yard net punting average is fifth in the NFL and only 34.3 percent of his punts have even been returned (fair catches or out of bounds). Koch has had back-to-back really strong games. He was a big reason the Ravens dominated field position early in the game in Pittsburgh and got off to an early lead. Against Tennessee, Koch had a line drive punt that the returner, Leon Washington, couldn’t field. It bounced and rolled 69 yards, pinning the Titans back to their 15-yard line after the Ravens offense had been stopped at its own 16. It flipped field position in what was then a tie game. Koch later had a 39-yard punt that came down right at the 1-yard line, which was caught by Kamar Aiken and downed by Jeromy Miles.

“Things are coming together really well,” Koch said. “We’ve got a lot of rookies stepping up high this year, which has been really beneficial for the punt team, and a lot of guys covering their tails off getting down field and doing their job. It’s been a great unit.”

Koch had a sometimes frustrating season last year. He had nine touchbacks, which was tied for a career-high.

“I was definitely coming off, maybe not statistically one of my worst years, but mentally definitely one of my worst years,” Koch said.

“Things just didn’t bounce my way, I didn’t hit the ball as clean as I wanted. Some days I just didn’t have the confidence in certain balls. We’ve put an emphasis on that this offseason just to hone in on the skills and all the different balls that we have.”

Koch has shown an assortment of different styles of punts. He is a situational punter, so it’s not just booming it as deep as possible. Koch hits rugby-style end-over-end punts that are harder to field. He hits long line drives and high-skying punts that give the returner only the option of a fair catch. He also has punted well directionally, which can pin returners against a sideline and into the hands of the coverage unit.

Special Teams Coordinator/Associate Head Coach Jerry Rosburg said he hasn’t counted the number of different punts Koch has at his disposal.

“He has a lot of different skills. I’ll just say that,” Rosburg said.

“In my opinion, Sam has been a top punter in this league for a long time. … He’s a clutch player. He’s a fine punter. He’s got skills that belie his numbers sometimes, and we recognize that in our building. We love him. He’s our guy.”

A bigger Elvis Dumervil wreaking havoc on quarterbacks again

By Jeff Zrebiec
The Baltimore Sun
November 19, 2014

Elvis Dumervil was in a new city, getting to know new teammates and coaches and learning a new defense. Yet, his biggest challenge of all was coming to grips with a new role.

For the better part of six seasons with the Denver Broncos, Dumervil was an every-down player. He played the run and rushed the quarterback, a job he did well enough to be selected to three AFC Pro Bowl teams. But in his first season with the Ravens, the strong-side linebacker found himself on the sideline nearly 50 percent of the time while the defense was on the field.

"Obviously, as a competitor you want to play every play," Dumervil said Wednesday. "But I do know that you have to listen to your body and it works out. At first, it was a bit of an adjustment last year, but you have to take care of [being selfish] and put it aside for the team. I think it really helps the Ravens that we can rotate four guys."
Dumervil has not only accepted a reduced role but he's learned to thrive in it, re-establishing himself as one of the top pass rushers in the NFL. Heading into the Ravens' Monday Night matchup with the New Orleans Saints at the Mercedes-Benz Superdome, Dumervil has seven sacks over his past five games.

His 10½ sacks for the season tie him with the Philadelphia Eagles' Connor Barwin for second place in the NFL, behind only the Kansas City Chiefs' Justin Houston, who has 12. However, Dumervil has his eyes on an even bigger number: 15. That's how many sacks former Raven Peter Boulware had in 2001, setting a franchise single-season record that still stands.

"It's definitely in sight," Dumervil said when asked if that is a goal. "I'll be looking toward it."

The 30-year-old has 83½ sacks for his career and his best season was in 2009 when he had 17. It's not that Dumervil, who signed a five-year, $26 million deal with the Ravens in March 2013 after the infamous fax machine fiasco led to his release from Denver, had a poor year in 2013. He had 9½ sacks, just behind Terrell Suggs' team-high of 10, and forced two fumbles. But he never felt 100 percent comfortable on the field.

He had played mostly as a defensive end in a 4-3 defense during his time with the Broncos, and he was on the field for pretty much every snap. In 2012, his final season with Denver, he played 921 total snaps, meaning he was on the field 86.2 percent of the time.

But last season with the Ravens, he was down to 557 snaps, amounting to 51.7 percent of all defensive plays. He's played 386 snaps this year, or just under 56 percent of the defensive snaps. Defensive coordinator Dean Pees has rotated Dumervil, Suggs, Pernell McPhee and Courtney Upshaw on the outside, and those four have accounted for 19½ half of the Ravens' 25 sacks.

"It's not that I don't feel I can play every down. It's just when you have a lot of talent that we have, you can just stay fresh throughout the year," Dumervil said. "It just makes sense. It's a fortunate situation we have in Baltimore. Not every team has the luxury to do that. We have this type of talent and it helps to keep guys fresh."

To teammates, Dumervil's improved comfort level is noticeable. It was obvious to offensive guard Kelechi Osemele, who has to block him on occasion in practice, as early as training camp.

"He's a lot more comfortable, it seems, with the defense," Osemele said. "And just watching him out there when he's rushing, it doesn't look like he has to think of anything. He's starting to really come off the ball and anticipate the snap count and everything like that. His intensity and his speed and his quickness of realizing things and adjusting during practice seem to be a step up from the previous year."

Dumervil acknowledged that learning the Ravens' 3-4 hybrid defense posed a challenge.

"Obviously, the snaps reduced and learning the system — it's very complex here — and obviously playing a new position. There were a lot of new things going on and getting acclimated just with the off the field [stuff]," he said. "You have to get a whole new regime and get comfortable in a whole new system. It was a whole different challenge in that area."

But it wasn't just a one-sided challenge. As much as Dumervil had to learn about the Ravens, they had to learn about him, too.

"It was a big transition for him," Ravens coach John Harbaugh said. "We're not a straight 4-3 defense. He was in that defense for one year when [Ravens inside linebackers coach Don Martindale] was the defensive coordinator in Denver. I think he's become accustomed to it and we've probably become really understanding of his unique abilities and have been able to set up the system around him a little bit, too."

As a strong-side linebacker, Dumervil occasionally has some coverage responsibilities, but on most plays, he can be found rushing toward the quarterback on the edge rather than dropping back in coverage.

"I think we're calling more things that kind of get him going the way he likes to go rather than him dropping backward," Suggs said. "He's gotten accustomed to the system and he's playing great football right now."

Dumervil's play has justified his offseason decision to put about 10 pounds on his 5-foot-11, 255-pound frame. He felt after his first season with the Ravens that the extra bulk would help in the AFC North, which he deemed a more physical division.

The increased weight has added more power to his game. In the Ravens' Week 2 victory over the Steelers, Dumervil bull-rushed Marcus Gilbert and knocked the 6-foot-6 and 330-pound tackle on his back en route to sacking Ben Roethlisberger.

It also hasn't robbed him of his explosiveness. He beat former teammate Michael Oher around the edge on a speed move for one of his 2½ sacks against the Tennessee Titans two weeks ago.

His challenge Monday will be to get to Drew Brees, who Dumervil called a "top quarterback — maybe all time." With his quick release and ability to move around the pocket, Brees has been sacked just 13 times this season. Only the Cincinnati Bengals' Andy Dalton (12) and the Broncos' Peyton Manning (11) have been sacked fewer times among starters.

It's exactly the challenge that Dumervil relishes.

"We're built for this type of situation," he said. "We have a lot of guys on this team who are tough mentally, so we're excited for that challenge."

Ravens Front Office Strikes Big With Offseason Moves

New faces like Steve Smith, Owen Daniels, Gary Kubiak and C.J. Mosley have been key this year.

In many ways, the Ravens have a new starring cast this season.

The team's leading rusher, receiver, tackler and play caller are all new to Baltimore. And the new additions are a big reason why the Ravens are currently sitting atop the AFC North standings.

The fresh faces have adjusted well to life in Charm City, and the immediate impact they've made on the field shows that the Ravens' front office had another impressive offseason.

"I'm impressed, yes. Not surprised" Head Coach John Harbaugh said. "Those guys are excellent players, and that's what we were planning on."

The newcomers have arrived from a variety of backgrounds.

Veteran receiver Steve Smith Sr. and tight end Owen Daniels came to town after getting cut by teams where they had established long, productive careers.

Running back Justin Forsett was cast off by a few teams before landing in Baltimore as an expected role player, and then ultimately taking over the starting job. Center Jeremy Zuttah came as part of a shrewd trade by General Manager Ozzie Newsome, who made it a priority to strengthen the interior of the offseason line this offseason.

Linebacker C.J. Mosley was drafted with the team's highest pick in the last eight years, and arrived with expectations to become the long-term anchor in the middle of the defense. He immediately became a starter, and is one of six rookies currently getting significant playing time.

Offensive Coordinator Gary Kubiak decided to join Harbaugh's staff instead of taking time away from the game after he was fired by the Houston Texans.

In total, the Ravens have 20 players on the 53-man roster who weren't with the team last season, in addition to an entirely new offensive coaching staff.

"C'mon, the fact that all of that has happened and we've still been able to win games is pretty impressive," quarterback Joe Flacco said. "We have new people. We've had to play with rookies. We've had to bring up practice squad guys. The fact that we have that depth and the fact that we have those guys on our team is pretty impressive."

The veteran additions to the roster have made the most noticeable difference through the first seven games of the year.

Smith burst onto the scene and has been one of the best receivers in football. He leads the Ravens with 38 catches for 640 yards and four touchdowns, and is on pace for the best season he's had in years.

Daniels has a similar story.

The former Texan joined his previous head coach in Baltimore and quickly developed a rapport with Flacco. He was instrumental in helping his teammates learn Kubiak's offense, and he immediately stepped into an elevated role when Dennis Pitta was lost for the season. Daniels has had no problem picking up the slack, and he has 27 catches for 275 yards and three scores.

"Owen and Steve have proven to be really key players for us," Flacco said. "They catch the ball and they get open – it's really simple."

While the signing of Smith and Daniels drew plenty of fanfare, Forsett's arrival went under the radar. The seven-year veteran hadn't rushed for more than 500 yards since 2010, and he had started just seven games in his career. Many speculated that he was occupying a roster spot until Ray Rice returned from a two-game suspension.

But the Ravens ultimately cut Rice, and Forsett proved he was much more than a placeholder. He's a top-five rusher in the NFL with 87 carries for 503 yards, and has the league's best yards per carry average at 5.8.

"Forsett is a good back and this is the best opportunity he's had in the league to prove himself and play," Flacco said. "With our running back situation, we didn't even know what it was going to be like until the last second. So the fact that we have been so good at that position is pretty impressive."
For as much as the players deserve credit for the strong start, Kubiak's system has transformed Baltimore's offense. Flacco is on pace for a career season, and the Ravens are on track to have a top-10 offense for the first time since 1996.

Kubiak commanded instant respect from the time he arrived in January, and the players quickly adapted to his system.

"I really do think that the way Gary has been calling the game is allowing us to play fast and not think about a lot of things," Flacco said. "It's just so understated, the fact that you can go out there and not have to worry about five different things on a play. You can worry about one or two things and go out there and do your job. You can worry about playing football. You can worry about playing physical."

The focus now for the Ravens is to continue the momentum built in the first seven games to carry into the second half of the season. The message from players and coaches throughout the week is that they can't celebrate anything yet, especially with a key game looming against the Bengals.

"I guess we're doing good. At the end of the day, it's all evaluated on how well we do in the end, how far we go," Smith said. "So to throw a party right now, I think, is premature. I think we just have to keep grinding out, and keep trying to build, and build on playing like a Raven."

In red zone, Ravens' defense has put up stop sign this season

Ravens outside linebacker Pernell McPhee zeroed in on his target after lining up over the right guard and looping inside to his left to bust through the middle of the Atlanta Falcons' offense Sunday.

Once McPhee wrapped up besieged Falcons quarterback Matt Ryan with his right arm, he alertly popped the football out of Ryan's grasp with his left as outside linebacker Elvis Dumervil pounced on the fumble deep in Ravens' territory.

The big play was emblematic of the kind of stout red-zone defense the Ravens' defense is becoming known for this season.

Heading into Sunday's game against the Cincinnati Bengals, the Ravens have emerged as the top-ranked red-zone defense in the NFL, allowing opponents to score touchdowns on just 36.4 percent (8 of 22) of their possessions inside the Ravens' 20-yard line.

That's a major reason why the Ravens have surrendered only 104 points — 14.9 per game — the fewest in the league.

"The main thing down in the red zone is execution, and it's a big sense of pride for the defense that we don't want to let the other team into the end zone," said Ravens rookie inside linebacker C.J. Mosley, who leads the defense with 60 tackles. "We just stay calm. You've got to have communication and smart guys on defense, especially in the back end. There's not much space, but there are so many things the offense can do running routes. It all comes back to communication, and we have that history of stopping people."

Inside the red zone, space is severely constricted and offenses tend to get creative. Quick-hitting passes, misdirection, jump balls and old-fashioned power football are the traditional ways to score.

None of those strategies have been particularly effective against the Ravens this season, nor were they last season, when the team ranked ninth in red-zone defense and 12th in scoring defense.

As the Ravens' defense continues to emerge as a stingy red-zone outfit, they're building a hard-nosed mentality about protecting their turf in close quarters.

"It's where you get the points, and, obviously, we don't want to let them score," said Dumervil, who leads the Ravens with seven sacks. "I don't like the phrase of [bend, don't break], whatever that's called. We kind of want to be steady throughout the whole field, but it's something where we can't allow the offense to score points.

"We have to keep it up. To whom much is given, much is expected. So, we had a good start, but we have to continue to go the whole season. That's the difference between being good and great. For me, playing defense is all about energy and having fun, flying to the ball. When those things happen, turnovers happen, big plays happen."

The reasons behind the Ravens' success in the red zone goes back to personnel, scheme and the mentality the defense has derived through years of playing together.

The Ravens have a large, active front seven headlined by outside linebackers Terrell Suggs, Dumervil and McPhee, big defensive linemen in Haloti Ngata and Brandon Williams, fast-reacting inside linebackers in Mosley and veteran Daryl Smith and a secondary that's physical and not susceptible to jump balls, especially imposing cornerback Jimmy Smith.

The Ravens have also played intelligently, maintaining gap integrity and lane discipline in run-stopping and pass coverage, and have avoided bunching up. They've already forced four turnovers in the red zone.

"Good communication, it starts with that," defensive coordinator Dean Pees said. "Whatever the call is down there, you can't have a mental mistake. When you have a mental mistake and break down in the red zone, it's usually a touchdown. Second of all, I think you have to be physical on defense because you can't allow them to run the ball in. That's always the No. 1 priority.

"And, three, I think you just have to have a mindset that you're not in a panic mode. It's just like when you have a sudden change. After a turnover or something, you can take two mindsets: You can either run in there or go in all upset because the ball was turned over or they had a big play, or you can go in there with the mindset that, 'Hey, we have to really hunker down and get it done.'"
The last time the Ravens played the Bengals, they contained a typically explosive offense and held them to five field goals in the first half. The Bengals converted none of their two red-zone scoring opportunities, keeping the game close as the Ravens' defense prevented a potential blowout during an eventual 23-16 defeat. Wide receiver A.J. Green's 77-yard touchdown catch in the fourth quarter was the difference.

"You want to be good, period, but you don't ever want to give up points and you always try to limit their scoring," said Daryl Smith, who ranks second on the defense with 57 tackles. "We work on red-zone defense every week. We take a lot of pride in that.

"It's just guys coming together, understanding what we have to get done and playing together, trusting each other. There's still room for improvement. We've just got to continue to build on that and continue to grow together."

The Ravens rank 16th in total defense because they've given up an average of 345.9 yards per game. Big plays have been the problem, and Pees acknowledged that bothers him.

They've also surrendered a lot of yards in the second half of blowout victories when they've stopped trying to actively pressure the quarterback.

"I really feel like we're starting to get there," Pees said. "I think we would be there in that top-five group if we hadn't given up some big plays and yardage and some games that we just absolutely didn't need to give up the yardage in, not that you ever want to give up any. But we just gave up some plays early on that hurt you statistically. It's not about that. It's about playing as well as we can play. And I do think that we're playing at that caliber.

"You can't sit back and say, 'OK, well, we have a good red zone team.' Right now we're playing well in the red zone, but we have to continue to do that."

It's been nine years since the Ravens led the NFL in scoring defense during the 2006 season when Rex Ryan was their defensive coordinator. The only other time the Ravens led the NFL in scoring defense was during their Super Bowl XXXV championship season in 2000, when they established the league record for fewest points (165) allowed in a season.

"We're doing some good things," Dumervil said. "There's a lot of football left. We're not going to get too excited about what we're doing right now. We just have to stay hungry, continue to work, and we have a lot to prove this year."

The Ravens had their best offensive performance despite being without two starting offensive linemen.

The breakout performance by the Ravens offense Sunday was impressive enough on its own. Making it even more eye-popping was that the Ravens did it without their key starters along the offensive line. Starting left tackle Eugene Monroe and left guard Kelechi Osemele were both sidelined Sunday because of knee injuries, and the Ravens turned to a pair of rookies to fill their shoes.

Fifth-round pick John Urschel played the first game of his career at left guard, and undrafted rookie James Hurst made his third-straight start at left tackle. Their inexperience didn't show, as they played part in a historically dominating performance where the Ravens put up 38 points in the first half and cruised to a 48-17 victory over the Tampa Bay Buccaneers.

"To play the way they did against a really good front says so much," Head Coach John Harbaugh said.

The offense had a stellar overall showing, and a strong performance from the line was part of the reason. The group gave quarterback Joe Flacco time to throw – he was never sacked or even hit – and he used that time to carve up Tampa's secondary.

"I think those guys obviously played really well," Flacco said. "As a unit we played really well and I got to feel good about how those guys did. We have two guys who are backups and played in the game and we were able to operate well still, it's nice to see that."

The line also opened up holes in the running game, as running back Justin Forsett ran for 111 yards on 14 carries.

"The offensive line did a heck of a job, and we got it today," Forsett said. "All the guys up front just stepped up early. We wanted to start fast and we got that done."

Urschel and Hurst both filled in for players who are pillars of the Ravens offense, but the unit gave no indication that it was without two key leaders.The Ravens tried to give Osemele a chance to play, as he went through drills on the field during pre-game warmups. He was clearly hobbled, and the Ravens instead decided to give Urschel the starting nod. It was the first game that Urschel has even been active this year.

"It was an honor to be able to start today," Urschel said. "First start in the NFL. It means a lot that the coaches have that faith in me and just the fact that the other offensive linemen, the other guys on the team took care of me and that we were able to get things going quickly. It was a good start."

Hurst and Urschel have both drawn praise from the coaching staff since arriving in Baltimore this spring. They both have good size, and they've quickly picked up the system from Offensive Line Coach Juan Castillo.

"They're both very smart and both good athletes," Harbaugh said. "When you have players that are smart and you have a coach coaching your group who's as good a trainer of techniques that you're ever going to see in football, you're in a unique position. So those guys are coachable, they understand what he's teaching them, and they take it one practice to the next."

The emergence and development of the young offensive linemen has given the Ravens plenty of depth in the trenches where players tend to get banged up over the course of the season. Hurst and Urschel have both shown they're able to make the jump to the NFL and they're ready to fill in for as long as needed.

"I feel like I did well. I feel like I had a solid performance," Urschel said. "There are obviously things that I need to improve upon. Biggest thing is just go back and look at the film, see what I did well, keep doing that well, see what I didn't do so well and work to improve on that."

Mosley shines during rookie season with Ravens

OWINGS MILLS, Md. (AP) — The comparison between C.J. Mosley and Ray Lewis began on draft day, when the former Alabama standout became the first middle linebacker selected in the first round by the Baltimore Ravens since Lewis in 1996.

Minutes after being plucked by Baltimore with the 17th overall pick last May, Mosley insisted he would carve out his own niche.

"I'm not trying to go in there and be the next 52 or anything like that," Mosley said. "I'm going in there to be C.J. Mosley and help the team win."

Mosley stands by that assessment five months later, even though he's showed many of the same traits Lewis displayed during his stellar 17-year career with Baltimore. Five games into his professional career, Mosley is the Ravens' leading tackler. He had 14 tackles and an interception last week against Indianapolis and has batted away five passes, high among NFL linebackers.

Very Lewis-like. And still, Mosley will have none of it.

"When I first came in, I said I wasn't going to try to be the next Ray Lewis," Mosley said Wednesday. "I have to be me and play the way I play. But to be mentioned with him is a great honor."

Mosley has a lot to learn, but so far he's been impressive. His 47 tackles is high among NFL rookies and he's the only player in the league with at least 40 tackles, an interception, a fumble recovery and a forced fumble.

"He makes very few mistakes," coach John Harbaugh said. "He's playing good football, he's a really good tackler, he's done a nice job of coverage. But he'll be the first to tell you, he's not going to rest on any past performance."

Yep, that's exactly what Mosley says. Ask him his thoughts on being Baltimore's leading tackler, and he shrugs and talks about just doing his job.

"I can't say I thought about that, but I knew what kind of player I was and I knew that's why the Ravens drafted me, to make plays and run around on the field," Mosley said. "That's the kind of linebacker I am. I've got to keep doing that and be better every week."

At Alabama, Mosley played on two national championship teams and earned the Butkus Award in 2013 as the nation's best linebacker. None of that guaranteed success at this level, so Mosley arrived at training camp with the understanding that he would have to earn a starting spot.

That is precisely what happened. Like Lewis, Mosley started in his first NFL game. Not only that, but Mosely finished second on the team with six tackles in a loss to Cincinnati.

"From Day One, he's been a humble guy who wants to learn," Ravens veteran linebacker Elvis Dumervil said. "He's very mature in his preparation, so really, we're not surprised in how he's been performing. He's been really preparing the right way ever since training camp."

Maybe playing at Alabama had something to do with it.

"I just refer to a saying we had at Alabama, and that's 'Do you job.' That's really all I'm doing," Mosley said. "You're supposed to run to the ball, make tackles and defend players in the passing game."

Dumervil kiddingly said Mosley would be even better if he played at his alma mater, Louisville. But he added, "Obviously Alabama is a good program and they've done a lot of good things there. But a kid like that, I've got to give him the credit. He has the want-to-do and he has been doing that. He comes in with his mind right. Kudos to him."

Mosley is already getting noticed around the league. Baltimore faces Tampa Bay on Sunday, and Bucs quarterback Mike Glennon knows he'd better watch out for No. 57.

"He's done a great job for them right out of the gate," Glennon said. "I'm sure he's going to continue to develop throughout the course of the year as he gets more comfortable with their defense. Already, just through a couple games, he's making a lot of plays. He just has a knack for the ball."

In other news, the Ravens put cornerback Asa Jackson (toe) on the IR-designated to return list, cut tight end Phillip Supernaw, signed cornerback Dominique Franks and claimed tight end Ryan Taylor off waivers.
